There’s an arc where the team starts running out of energy to transform and the cute animal sidekick scolds them for being so profligate, but it eventually turns out that their budget is fine and the real reason for the shortfall is that the animal sidekick has been committing embezzlement. The reveal segues into a recurring educational segment about various types of white-collar crime.

i understand the sentiment with the whole "people prefer dogs over cats because cats have boundaries" thing but dogs have boundaries too. i feel like people need to stop acting like dogs don't also have boundaries

furbearingbrick

Fun fact! The main reason chihuahuas have a reputation for being "mean" is that people deliberately tease them and ignore warning signals they'd otherwise heed if it were a medium- to large-breed. Goading your pet into a growling fit for a "funny" video isn't cute!

queerautism

People often treat small dogs' warning signals as funny, and punish big dogs', because they think a big dog growling is dangerous. No, it's telling you it was something to stop, just like small dogs are. If you take that away, either by punishing or disregarding it as funny and continuing, what you get is a dog who feels the need to escalate closer to biting without warning next time.

rabbitindisguise

I think the difference between the two is the lengths people expect them to enforce their boundaries rather than just having them

If you pet a cat when they're overstimulated, getting bit is a typical expected outcome even if the person doing it frames it negatively and blames the cat.

If you pet a (big) dog when they're overstimulated, getting bit is scandalous.

jenniferrpovey Follow

Despite the fact that being bitten by a cat is, in fact, more dangerous.

Cats carry a lot more bacteria in their mouths than dogs do, including something called Pasteurella multocida. This can cause cellulitis and septicemia and can be fatal without proper treatment.

Which means that if kitty doesn't want to be petted right now, safest not to pet kitty. If you have to handle an angry cat, then wear heavy work gloves (for example if you have a sick cat in distress who needs to go to the vet and does nooooot want to go into that carrier).

And yes, cats can be taught that biting is unacceptable behavior. The myth that cats can't be trained is just that: A myth.

ferrousferrule

My cats have been taught sit stand dance jump down jump up and come on out. They also rarely bite even when we misjudge their boundaries because we do respect them so much. We can trim their nails, brush their teeth, and mess with sore areas with minimal issues.

Because we respect their boundaries.

Same with dogs.

jenniferrpovey Follow

Yes, and you can also respect an animal's boundaries while also informing them that certain ways of expressing their boundaries are, in fact rude.

I mean, I am not going to let a horse bite me, but I'm still going to ask the question of why they are trying to bite me and whether there's something I can change to make them not want to do it, ya know.

Ferrousferrule, you should make videos about how you train your kitties! Sounds like you have it down.

ferrousferrule

I am blessed with exceptionally sweet and smart babies, who are also VERY food motivated (feral born, Poverty mindset). My sister the vet also trained her cat that soft surfaces were fine but hard ones (like tables and counters) were a no-no, and I can't figure out how she did that.

Aphroditos, the Trans Aphrodite worshipped widely in Amathus and Athens.

This particular pose, where a feminine deity lifts up their skirt or dress to reveal a phallus, is called the Anasyrma or Anasyromenos and was widely regarded as an apotropaic gesture, averting evil influences and bringing forth good fortune.

> "There's also a statue of Venus on Cyprus, that's bearded, shaped and dressed like a woman, with scepter and male genitals, and they conceive her as both male and female. Aristophanes calls her Aphroditus, and Laevius says: Worshiping, then, the nurturing god Venus, whether she is male or female, just as the Moon is a nurturing goddess. In his Atthis Philochorus, too, states that she is the Moon and that men sacrifice to her in women's dress, women in men's, because she is held to be both male and female."

-Macrobius, Saturnalia (C. 431 BCE)

This combination of masculinity and femininity in the same Deity and their assocition with the moon, both of which were considered to have fertilizing powers, was regarded as having an influence over the entire animal and vegetable creation.

They were often identified with Ermaphroditos (Hermaphroditus), the intersex child of Aphrodite and Hermes can we take a second to ponder on the fact that a kids movie did lady armor better than the entire film and comic industry guess who i'm talking about did you guess? Well you're fucking WRONG because it's Susan goddamn Pevensie

They gave her light armor, appropriate for a small archer:chainmail, an arm brace, chest plate, and a light skirt she can easily run around murderizing dudes in the face in her hair is also only loose in the promo pictures because Susan is fucking busy not dying because her hair was flying into her eyeballs fucking busy not dying because her hair was flying into her eyeballs so she braids that shit back her mail shirt is also loose enough that it doesn't impede her arm movements it's almost like she's dressed for a fight wow

I like the pinks and purples under her bitchin as hell leather armor here, because you don't have to be masculine to shoot someone in the goddamn face

talvin-muircastle

@bikiniarmorbattledamage you're up.

bikiniarmorbattledamage

Everyone, including the actress who played her, agrees that Susan was the most boring of the Pevensie siblings, yet the filmmakers had enough respect for the character to dress her in practical light armor. And didn't have to bend over backwards to slap on "feminine features" (read: giant boobplate) to make sure no-one confuses her gender.

Would other female characters in life action get non-exploitative clothes if they were also played by underage girls?

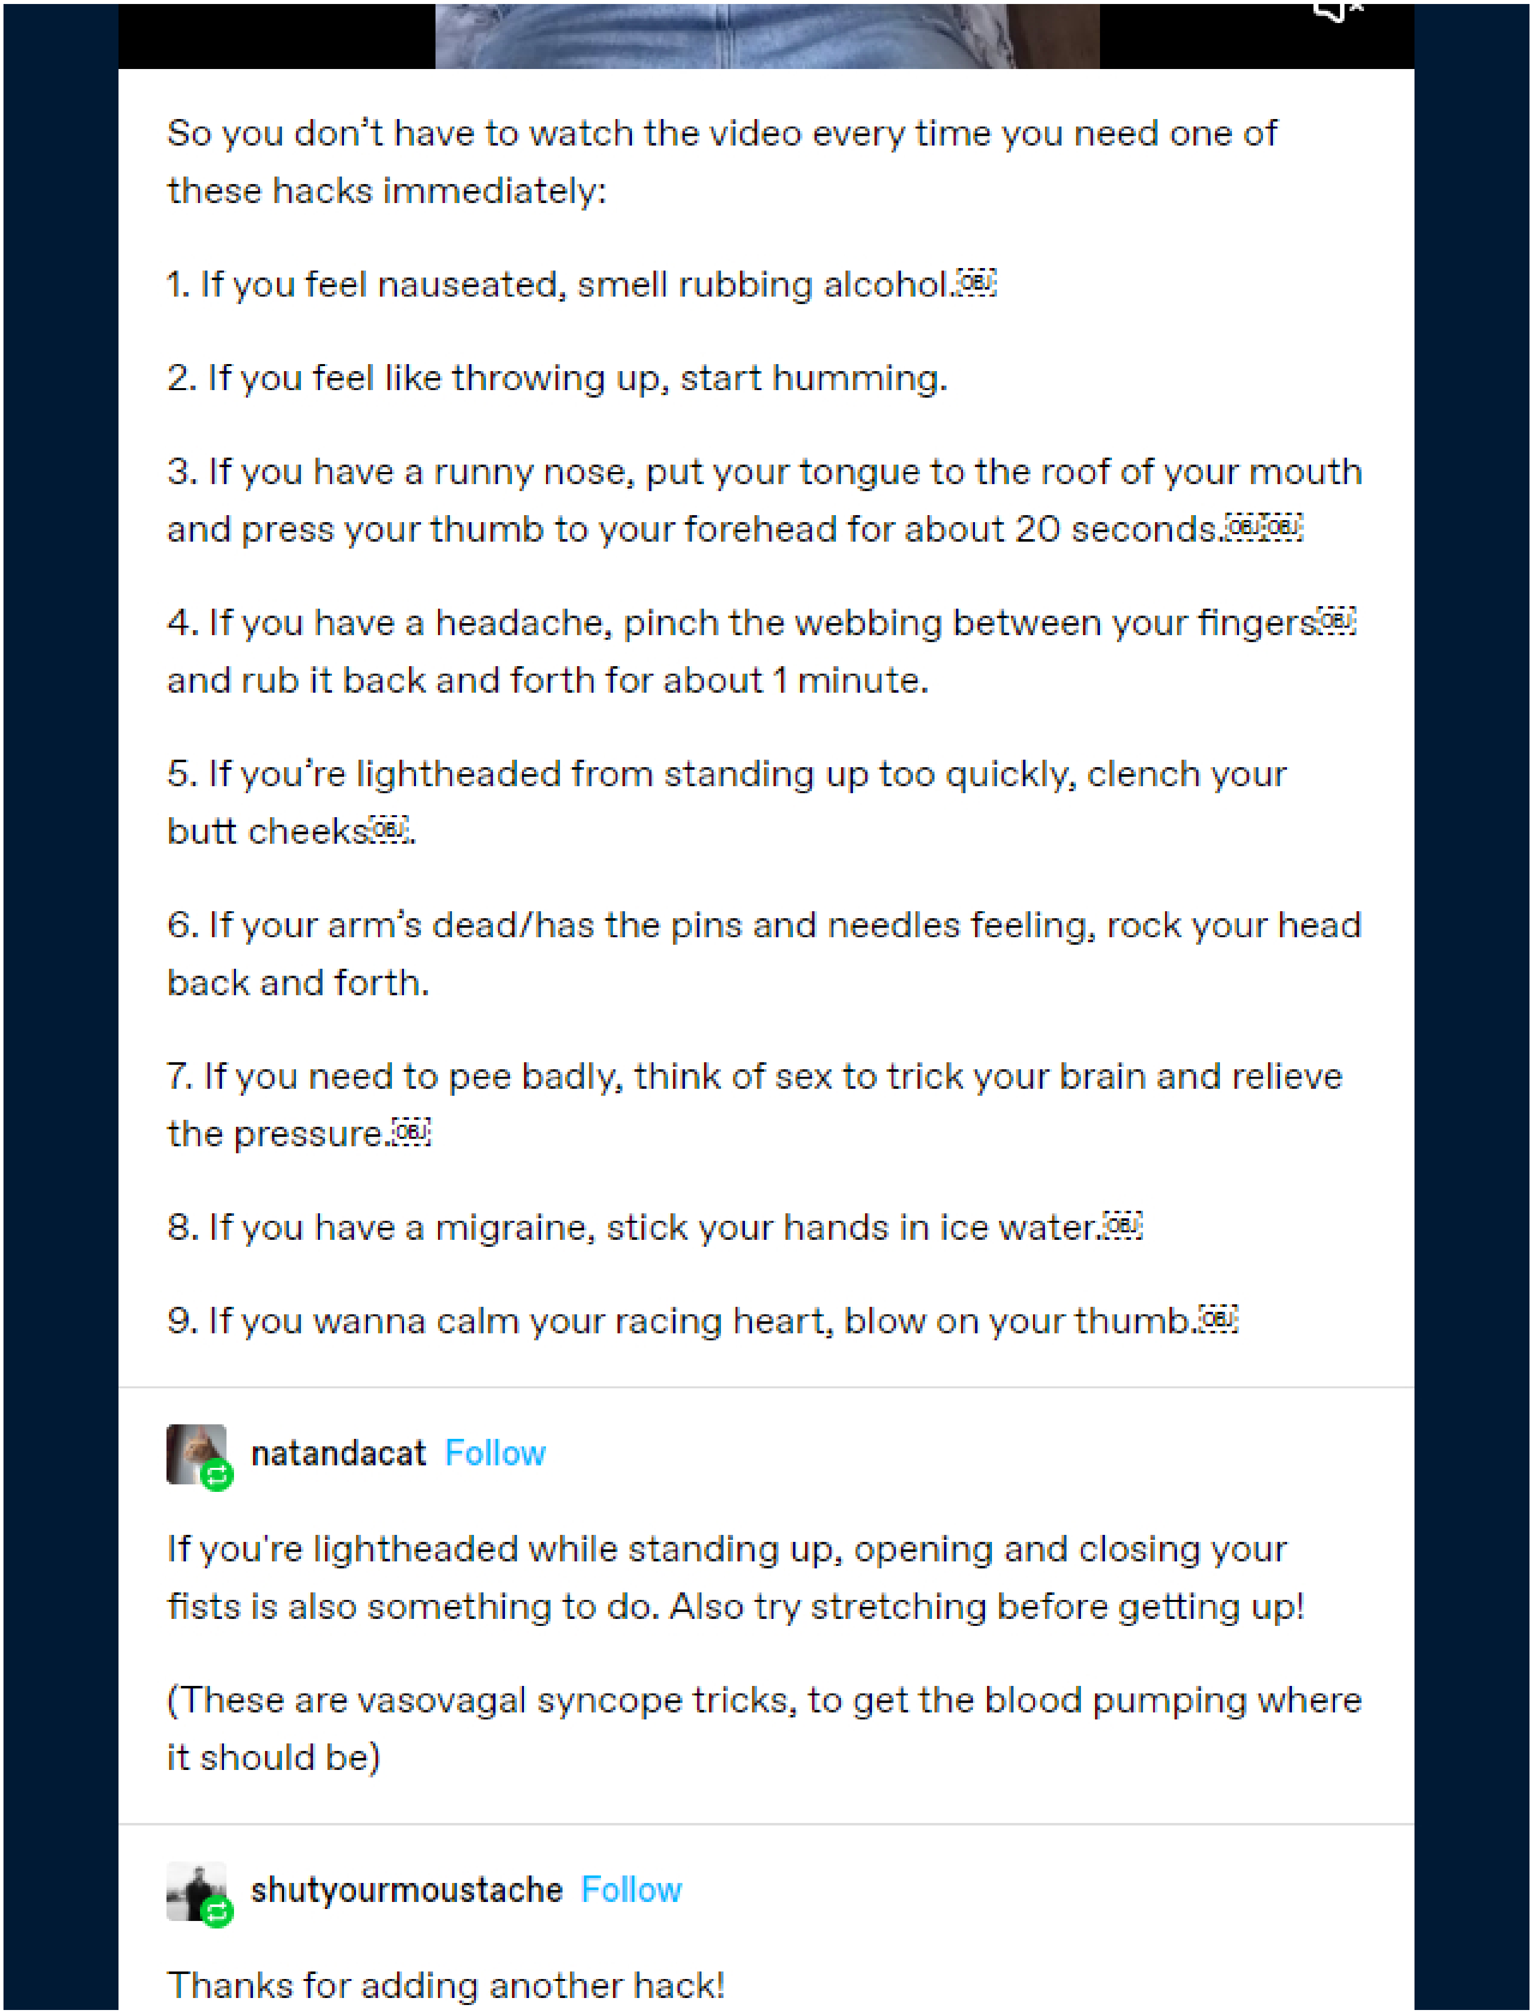
Dude I feel so nauseous



So you don’t have to watch the video every time you need one of these hacks immediately:

1. If you feel nauseated, smell rubbing alcohol.￼

2. If you feel like throwing up, start humming.

3. If you have a runny nose, put your tongue to the roof of your mouth and press your thumb to your forehead for about 20 seconds.￼￼

4. If you have a headache, pinch the webbing between your fingers￼ and rub it back and forth for about 1 minute.

5. If you’re lightheaded from standing up too quickly, clench your butt cheeks￼.

6. If your arm’s dead/has the pins and needles feeling, rock your head back and forth.

7. If you need to pee badly, think of sex to trick your brain and relieve the pressure.￼

8. If you have a migraine, stick your hands in ice water.￼

9. If you wanna calm your racing heart, blow on your thumb.￼

natandacat Follow

If you're lightheaded while standing up, opening and closing your fists is also something to do. Also try stretching before getting up!

My many operations are finally under way! After my first procedure, I can say that I am feeling significantly better, but I still have quite a long journey ahead of me. I am currently on a payment plan for my medical debt, and I won't sugar coat it: it's been extremely overwhelming. But I must press on and complete the 7 other operations before I can finally be deemed healthy. The greatest news to come out of my most recent operation is that I am no longer facing death as a likely end result; however, I am still facing the possibility of quadriplegia lest I continue with these operations. So I humbly ask you all to please consider donating, or at least sharing. Every penny put towards this fundraising campaign goes to saving my life. Every reblog is highly appreciated. Deforestation in Brazil is out of control. Bolsonaro is asking for billions to stop it.

A new analysis of satellite imagery shows some 430,000 acres of Brazil's Amazon rainforest have been wiped out so far in 2021.

We're just four months into the year and things are already looking bleak in the Brazilian Amazon.

About 430,000 acres of its lush, species-rich forests have been logged or burned so far in 2021, according to a new analysis of satellite imagery by the Monitoring of the Andean Amazon Project (MAAP). That's an area roughly 30 times the size of Manhattan.

The analysis, published earlier this week, comes as Brazil's president, Jair Bolsonaro, is negotiating a deal with US officials to funnel what could be billions of dollars into his administration to eliminate illegal deforestation within the decade.

At President Joe Biden's Climate Leaders Summit last week, Bolsonaro vowed Brazil would become carbon neutral by 2050 and recommitted to net-zero deforestation by 2030 — a target his government had previously deserted. "We could not agree more with your call for establishing ambitious commitments on the climate agenda," Bolsonaro said at the virtual event.

The US is among a handful of foreign governments that have been pushing Brazil to better protect its forests. But a large number of activists, organizations, and former environment ministers warn that giving money to the Bolsonaro administration won't solve the problem, and could even make it worse.

Either way, the new MAAP report shows that the situation on the ground is dire, as the Amazon gets one step closer to a dangerous tipping point — beyond which it could dry out.

one of my favorite this american life segments of late is about the people who played orchestra pit for phantom of the opera on broadway and how, like, a sizeable majority of them had literally been playing the show since it opened in 1988 (on broadway. I know it opened in 86 on the west end, you random pedants, but I am specifically talking about broadway musicians) because their contracts stipulated that they'd have jobs throughout the show's entire run... but nobody anticipated that phantom would become the longest-running broadway show of all time.

and none of these people wanted to walk away from a guaranteed job, so very few of them ever quit. they just kept doing the same show eight nights a week... for twenty or thirty years... and by the time it finally closed last year most of these musicians (who had been working together for DECADES) hated each other and really really fucking loathed phantom. I can't stop thinking about it. it's indescribably hellish to imagine but also the funniest thing I've ever heard in my life.

exeggcute Follow

One of my favorite stories, which should drive anyone who has ever played in a band crazy--there's this bassoon player who has sat next to the same clarinet player since 1988. She's convinced he plays half a note flat on every note he's ever played. He denies this.

can you imagine.

Jay Caspian Kang What do you think the right type of personality is that can handle this job?

Lowell Hershey I'm descended from a long line of serfs and peons, people who are still laboring in the fields for hardly any money and are relatively happy with that.

cleverlittlefox Follow

Kurt Coble I'm a violin operator.

Jay Caspian Kang Is that how you describe that?

Kurt Coble That's how we describe it, yeah. It's very technical. I have no emotional connection with it.

Jay Caspian Kang That's a violinist named Kurt Coble. He's a composer. His dream was always to write scores for horror films. He's now been at Phantom for 22 years, long enough to see three people in his section die.

Kurt Coble When I'm playing the show, nobody's interested in my creative input. I've often compared it to working in a hospice. It's just, we just keep the show alive as long as we can.

Jay Caspian Kang So here they all are, in this weird social experiment, trapped together for decades, 27 musicians crammed into this tiny space. A trumpet player told me it's like playing in a submarine.

cleverlittlefox Follow

And socially, it's a bit like middle school. There are the loners, the jocks, and the French horns. They're like the boys in the back of the bus. They bring in fart machines and run the same practical jokes over and over. Sometimes they even mess with the audience. The front row is right up against the pit, so close that their feet sometimes dangle next to the musicians heads. Occasionally, one of the French horn players would take out a bottle of whiteout and write little messages on the soles of the audience's shoes.

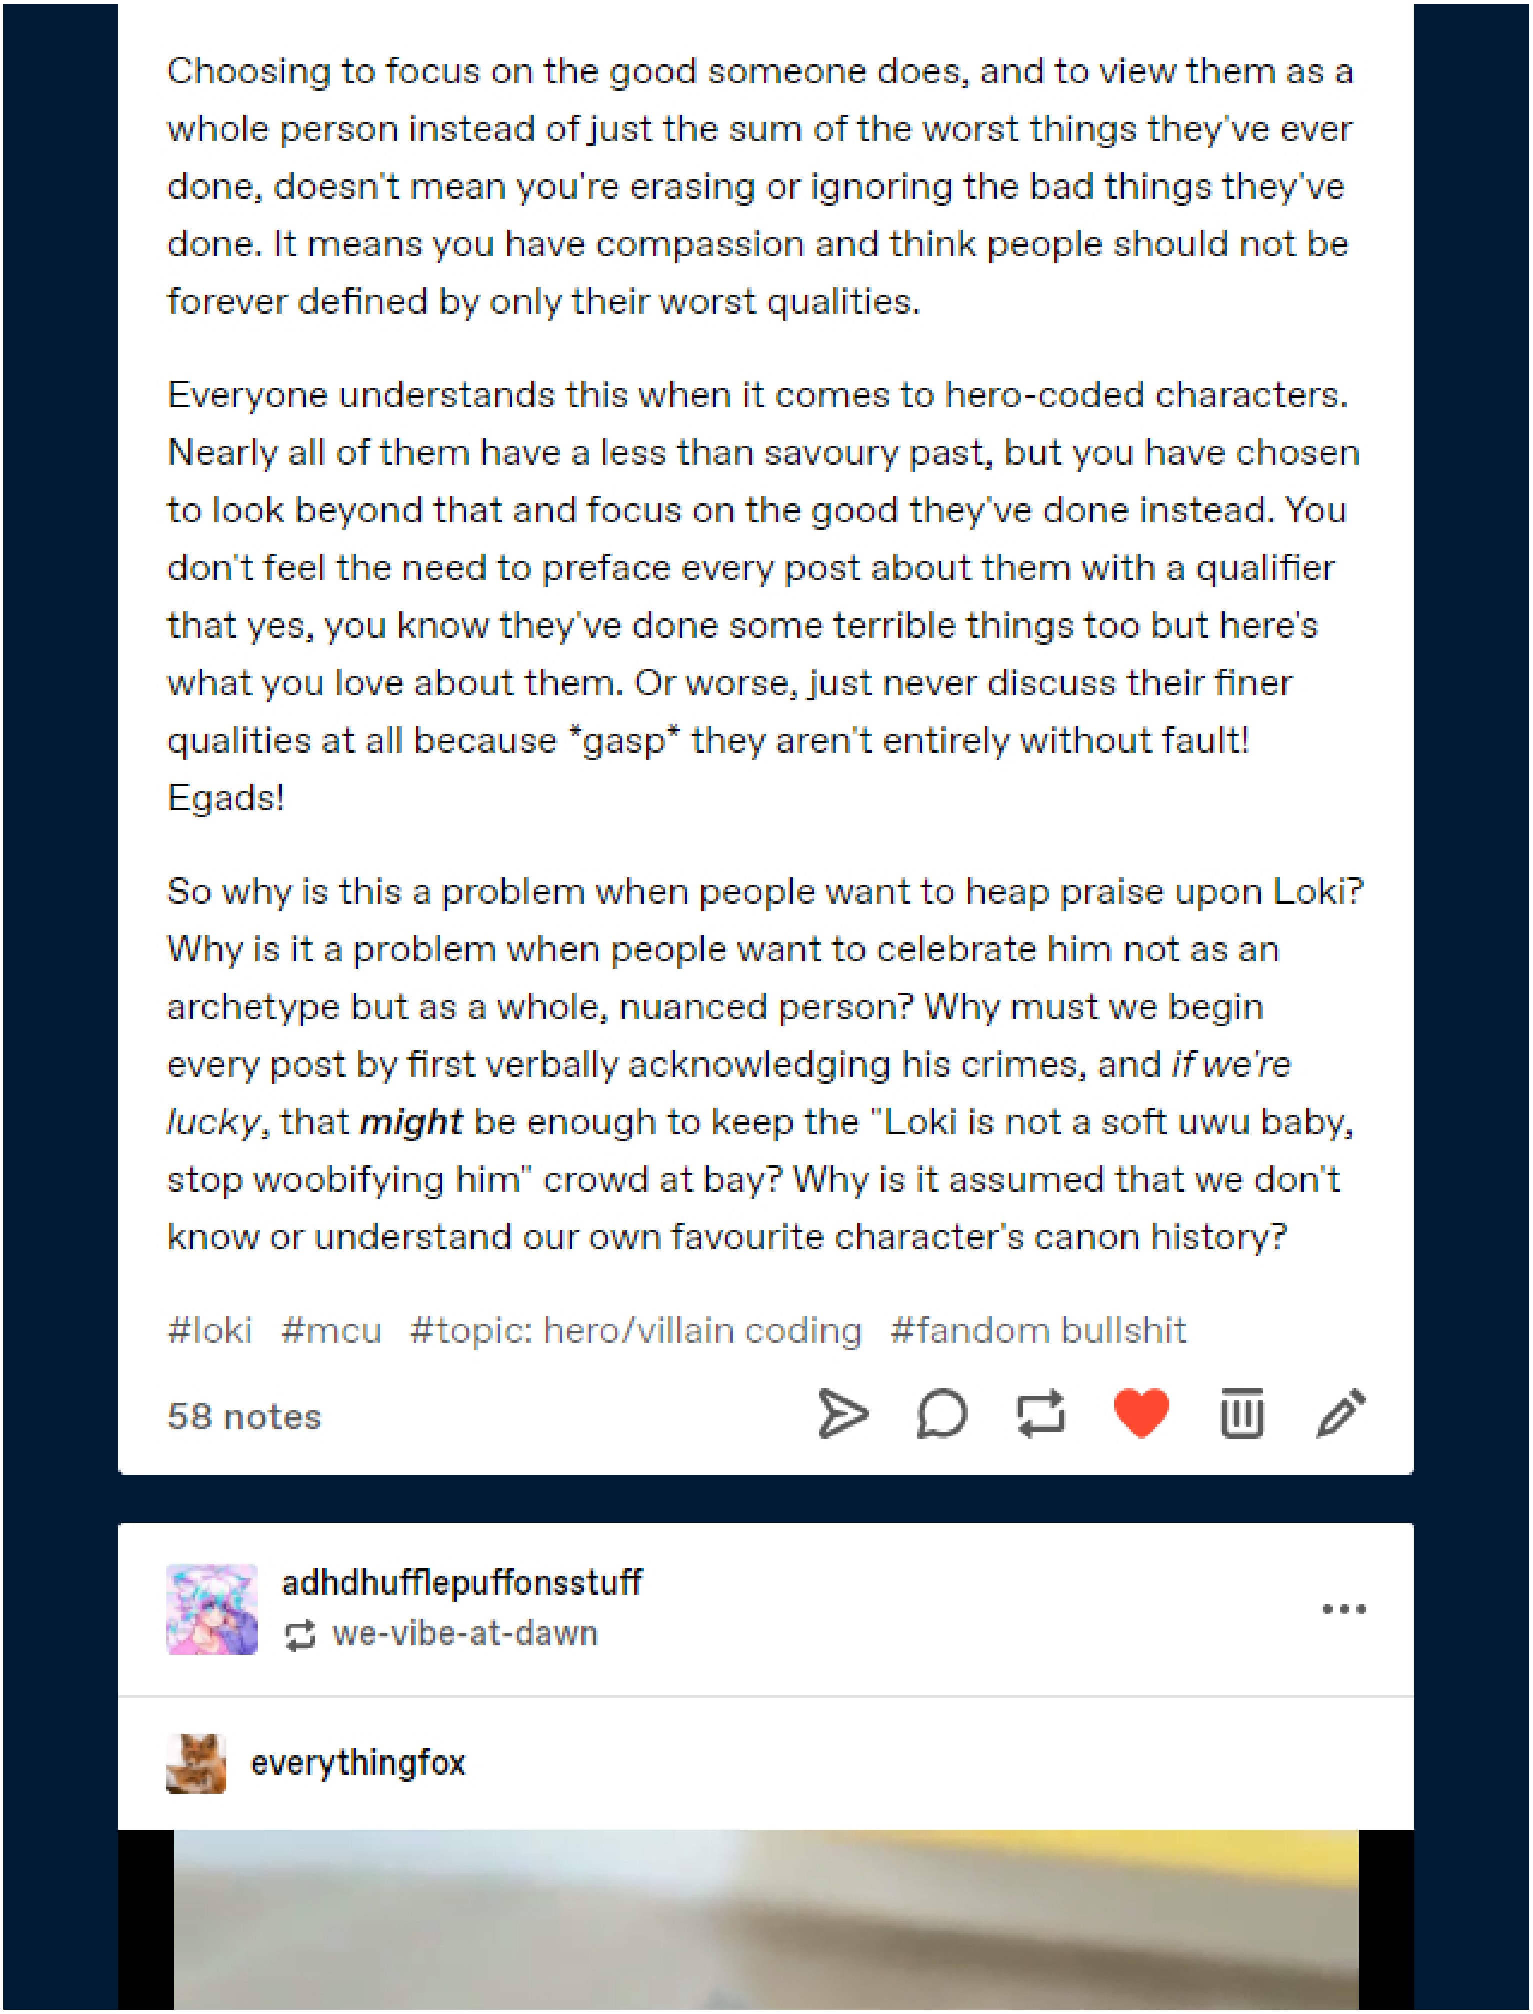
Loki has done bad things.

We know this.

Loki knows this.

He doesn't need to be reminded of it every five seconds as if the bad things he's done are the only thing he is. We don't need to be reminded of it every five seconds as if we've suddenly developed amnesia.



Choosing to focus on the good someone does, and to view them as a whole person instead of just the sum of the worst things they've ever done, doesn't mean you're erasing or ignoring the bad things they've done. It means you have compassion and think people should not be forever defined by only their worst qualities.

Everyone understands this when it comes to hero-coded characters. Nearly all of them have a less than savoury past, but you have chosen to look beyond that and focus on the good they've done instead. You don't feel the need to preface every post about them with a qualifier that yes, you know they've done some terrible things too but here's what you love about them. Or worse, just never discuss their finer qualities at all because gasp they aren't entirely without fault! Egads!

So why is this a problem when people want to heap praise upon Loki? Why is it a problem when people want to celebrate him not as an archetype but as a whole, nuanced person? Why must we begin every post by first verbally acknowledging his crimes, and if we're lucky, that might be enough to keep the "Loki is not a soft uwu baby, stop woobifying him" crowd at bay? Why is it assumed that we don't know or understand our own favourite character's canon history?

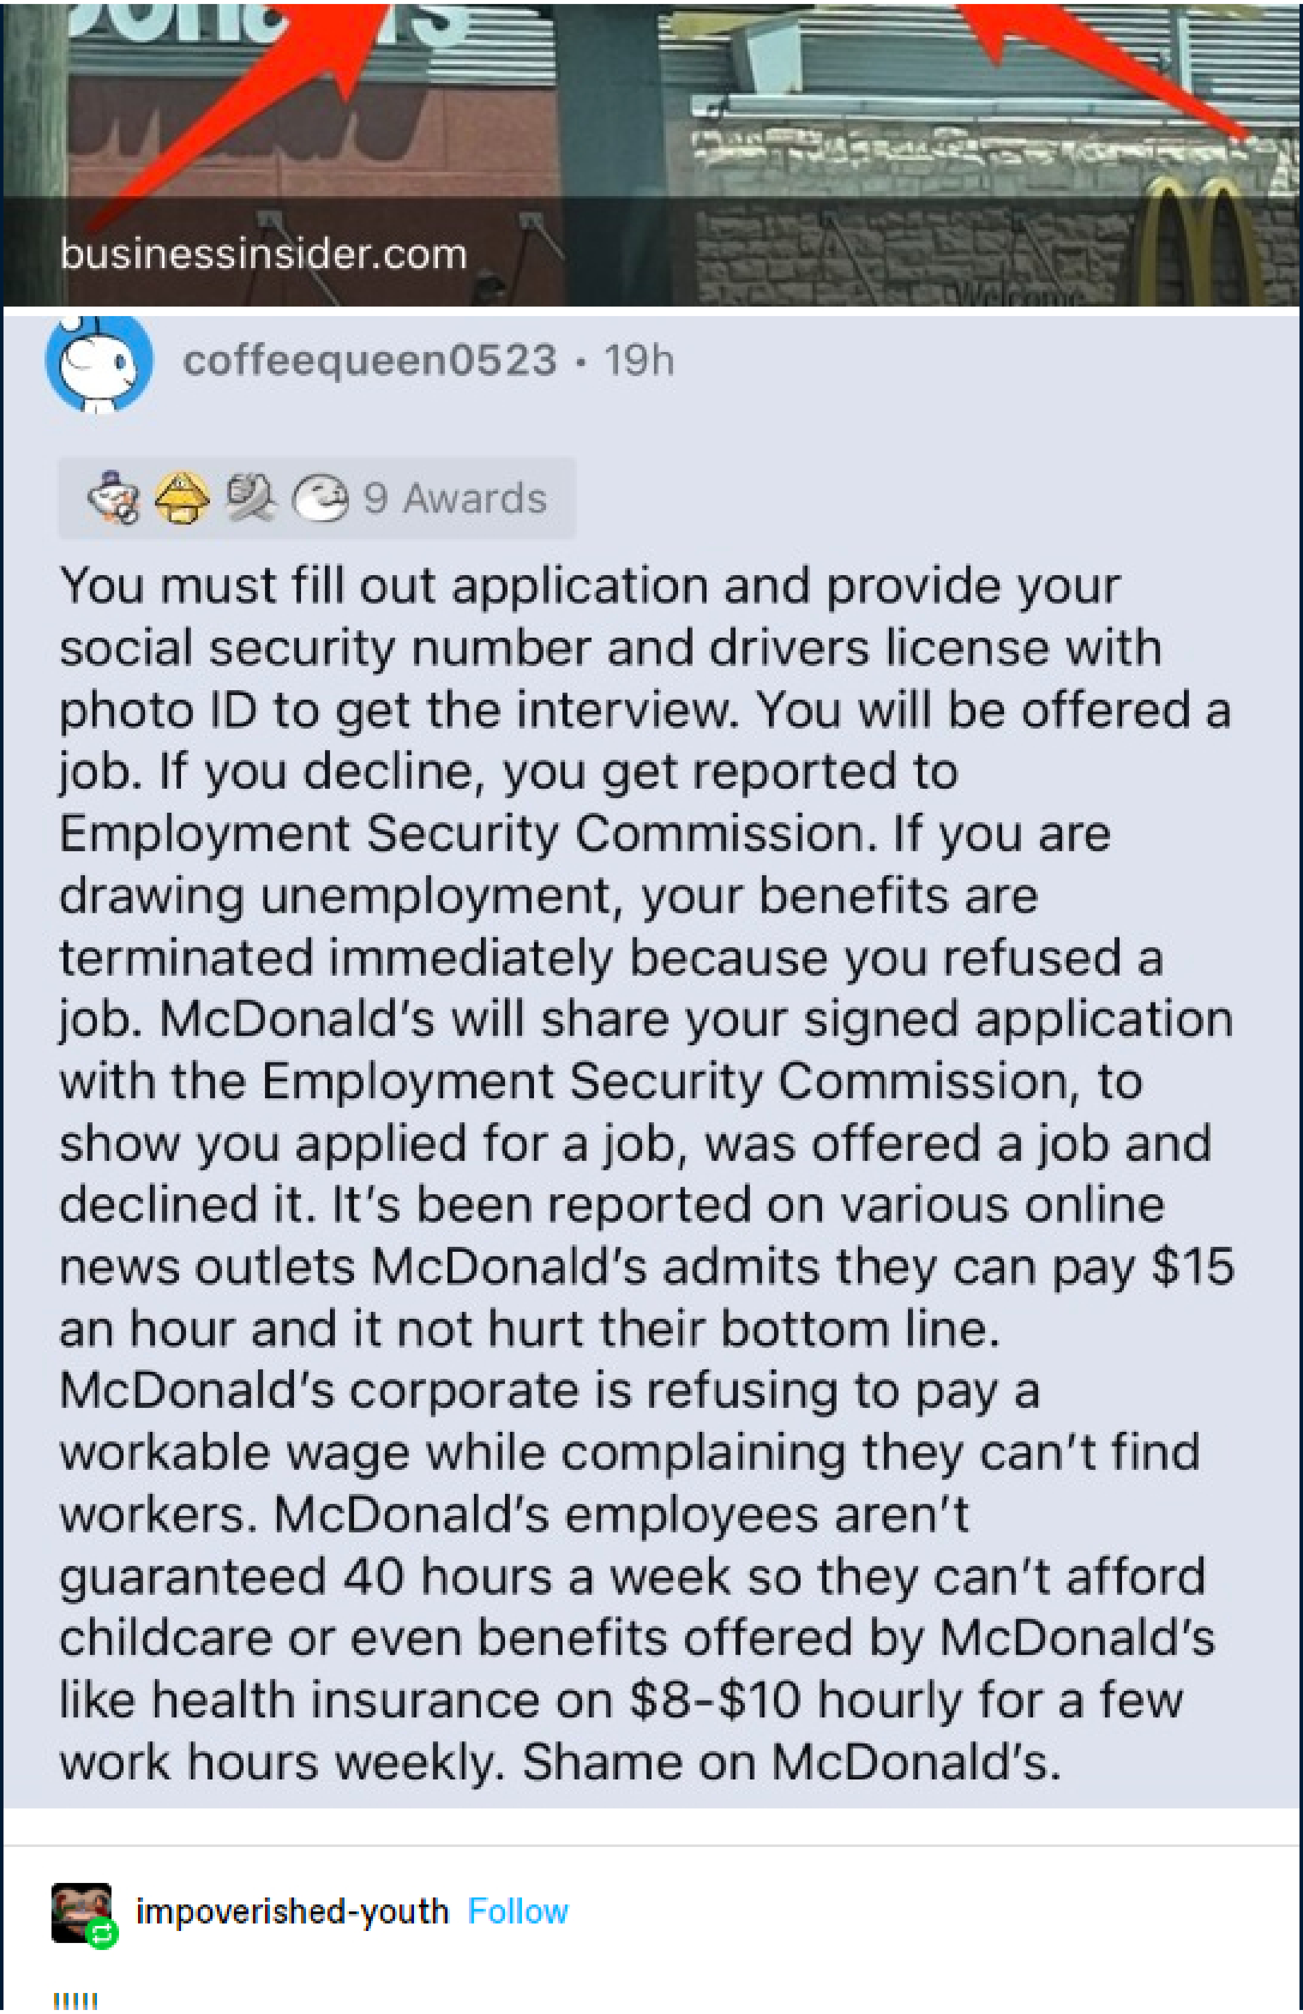
McDonald's pays $50 for job interviews, highlighting hiring struggles



coffeequeen0523 · 19h

You must fill out application and provide your social security number and drivers license with photo ID to get the interview. You will be offered a job. If you decline, you get reported to Employment Security Commission. If you are drawing unemployment, your benefits are terminated immediately because you refused a job. McDonald's will share your signed application with the Employment Security Commission, to show you applied for a job, was offered a job and declined it. It's been reported on various online news outlets McDonald's admits they can pay $15 an hour and it not hurt their bottom line. McDonald's corporate is refusing to pay a workable wage while complaining they can't find workers. McDonald's employees aren't guaranteed 40 hours a week so they can't afford childcare or even benefits offered by McDonald's like health insurance on $8-$10 hourly for a few work hours weekly. Shame on McDonald's.

I have a stock format and structure I use.

Dear Person I am Writing To:

This is an optional sentence introducing who I am and work for, included if the addressee has never corresponded with me before. The second optional sentence reminds the person where we met, if relevant. This sentence states the purpose of the email.

This optional paragraph describes in more detail what’s needed. This sentence discusses relevant information like how soon an answer is needed, what kind of an answer is needed, and any information that the other person might find useful. If there’s a lot of information, it’s a good idea to separate this paragraph into two or three paragraphs to avoid having a Wall of Text.

If a description paragraph was used, close with a restatement of the initial request, in case the addressee ignored the opening paragraph.

This sentence is just a platitude (usually thanking them for their time) because people think I’m standoffish, unreasonably demanding, or cold if it’s not included.

Closing salutation,

Signature.

People always ask me how I can fire off work emails so quickly. Nobody has figured out yet that it’s the same email with the details changed as needed.

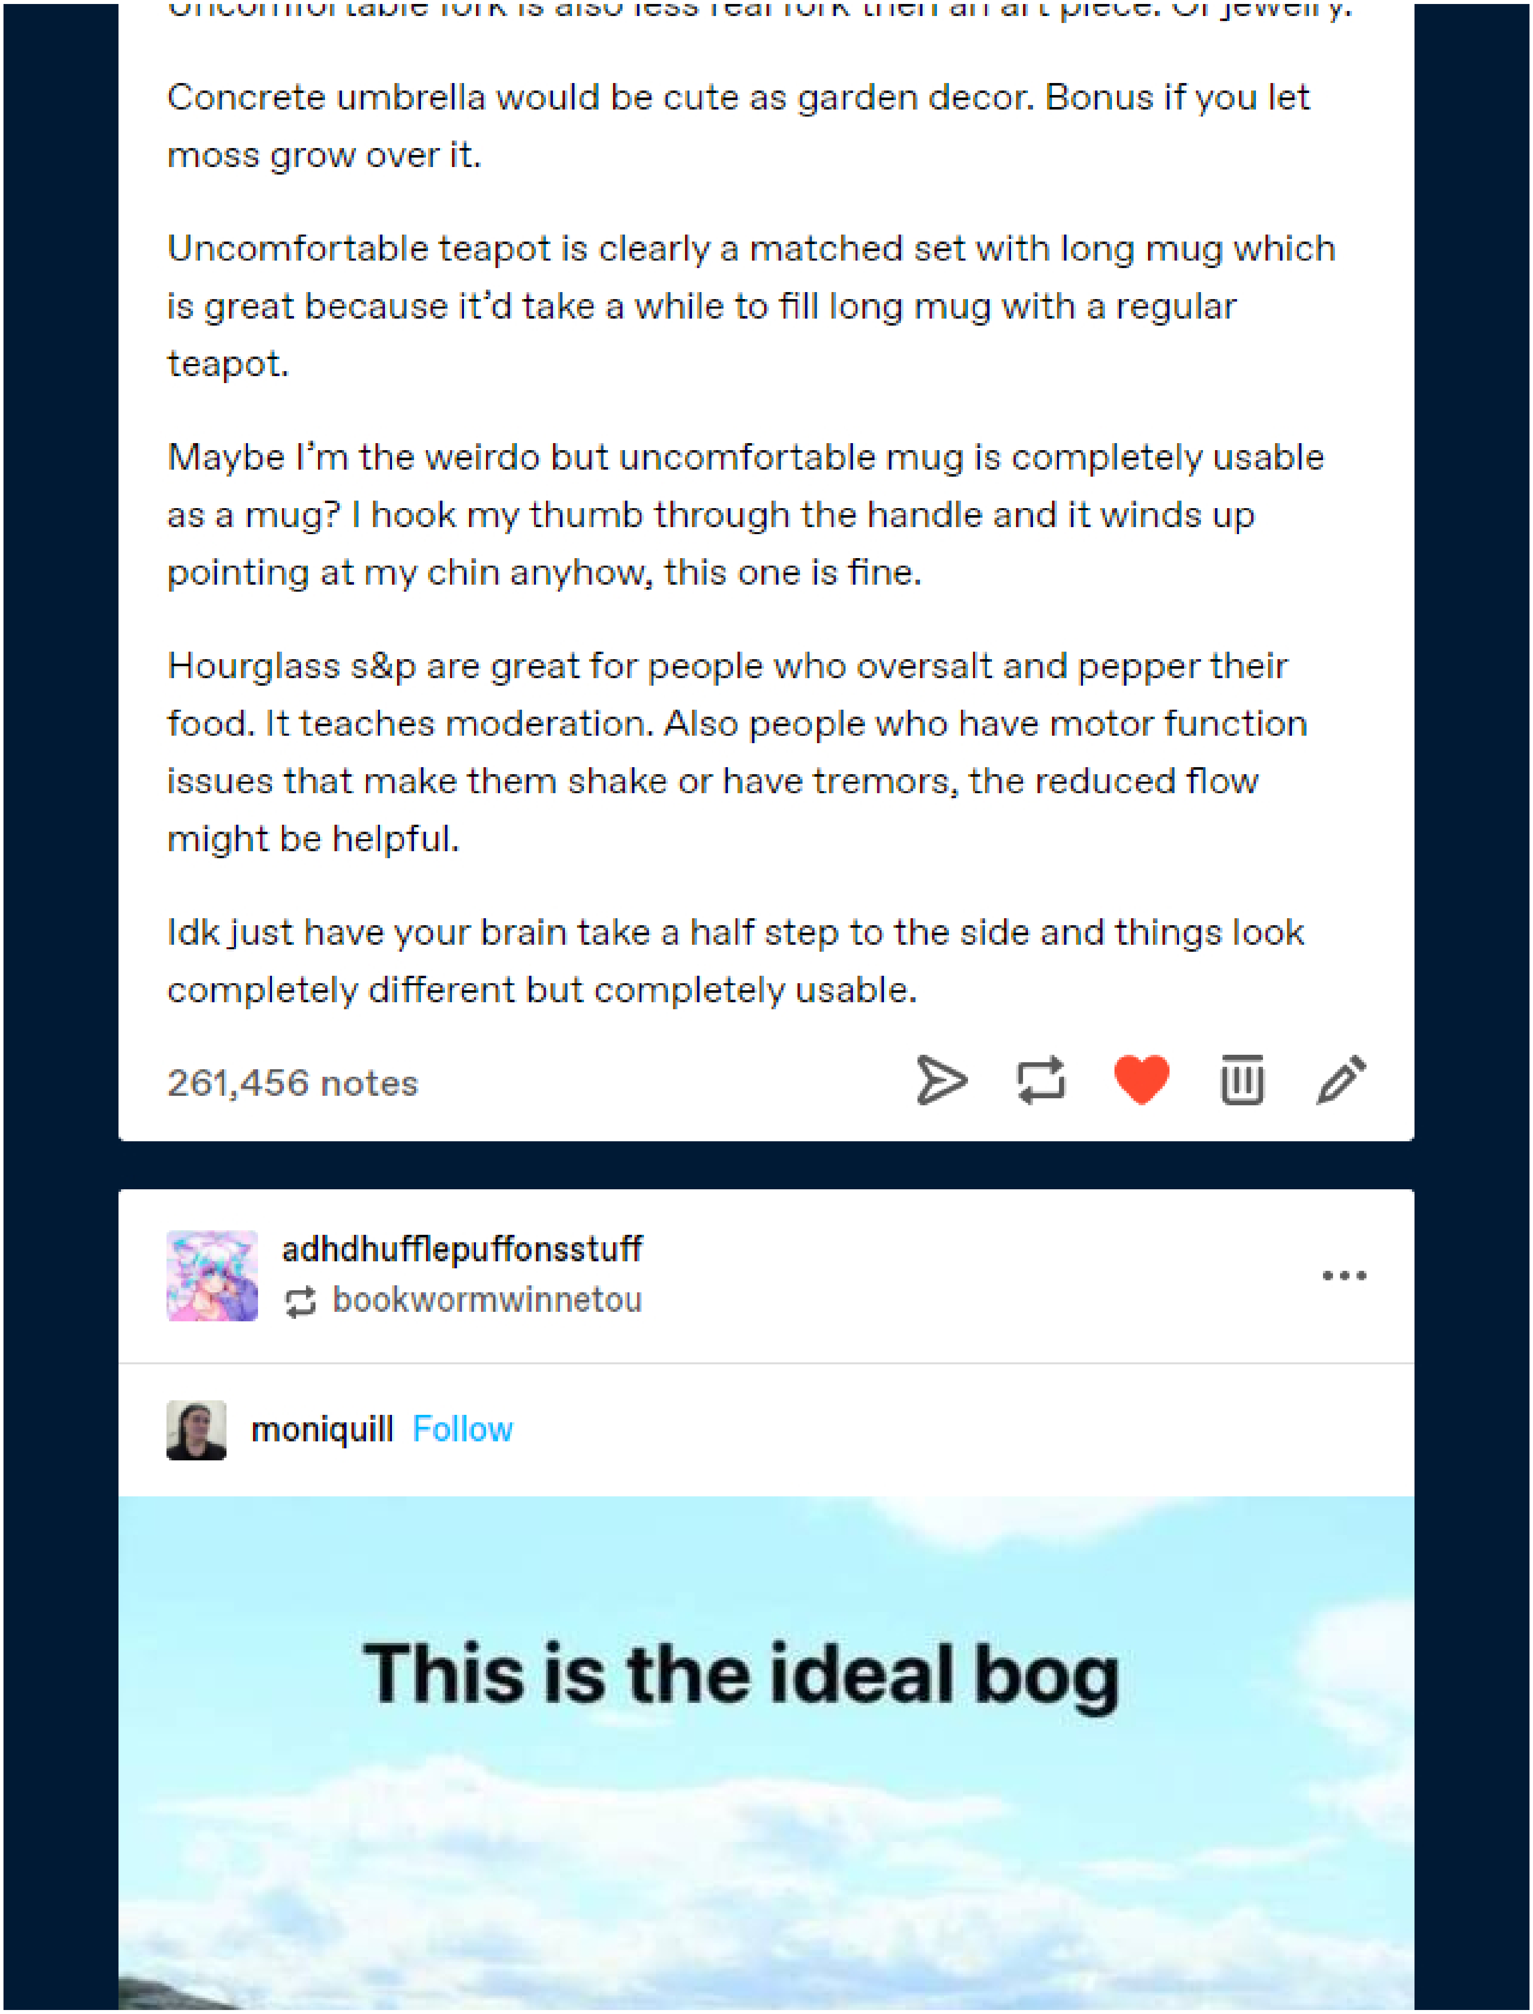
Honestly these are all usable as long as you are willing to see beyond the established method of interaction

Thick fork is a pretty useless fork but would be a cute paperweight for a chef or a foodie.

Engagement mugs, champagne glasses, and long mug all just need a straw. That's it.

Triple door is clearly for dog and cat owners who need to keep pets out of the room but wanna be able to interact. We've never owned a cat who couldn't jump a baby gate and two of our dogs taught themselves to unlatch the damn things, I'd have used these in a heartbeat.

Uncomfortable fork is also less real fork than an art piece. Or jewelry



Uncomfortable fork is also less real fork than an art piece. Or jewelry.

Concrete umbrella would be cute as garden decor. Bonus if you let moss grow over it.

Uncomfortable teapot is clearly a matched set with long mug which is great because it'd take a while to fill long mug with a regular teapot.

Maybe I'm the weirdo but uncomfortable mug is completely usable as a mug? I hook my thumb through the handle and it winds up pointing at my chin anyhow, this one is fine.

Hourglass s&p are great for people who oversalt and pepper their food. It teaches moderation. Also people who have motor function issues that make them shake or have tremors, the reduced flow might be helpful.

Idk just have your brain take a half step to the side and things look completely different but completely usable.

Signal Boost.

Attention all gifmakers, some of your gifs are compressing in size on upload. After a lot of experiments, @alivedean and I, figured out that it's only affecting gifs that are 4mb, 5mb, 6mb, and 7mb. Anything that's bigger does compress, and anything smaller than 3mb does not compress.

We don't know if it is a temporary glitch or not. Please try reaching out to tumblr if you can. If you want to see if it is happening to you, our suggestion is to download one of your old gifs (that are 4, 5, 6, or 7mb) and re-upload and save it in drafts. If they compress, the glitch is happening to you and going forward you should be mindful of what sizes to use. Either they need to be huge or they need to be tiny, there's no in-between anymore.

Please signal boost this. There's so many talented creators on the site and we don't want any of them to work hard and then realize their gifs don't look as good.

In modern times, Assyrians have been doubly mistreate in Iraq. They have been victims of executions, forced displacement campaigns, torture, violence and target of Islamist groups like al-Qaeda and ISIS. Since the 2003 Iraq war, they have fled from the country and their population has collapsed under the Government of Iraq. Majority of them have either fled to Iraqi Kurdistan or abroad. Even a small amount of 5 or 7 or 10 of foreign currency will help a lot. Our government has essentially abandoned us. People have turned to social media for help. WhatsApp groups and DMs on twitter/insta is where we find help. Our helpline is a Google doc. Situation is so dire that hospitals are discharging patients due to lack of oxygen. Y'all, this is a good time to mention that I am not affiliated with any charity or donation center and am not receiving donations on behalf of anyone.

This is a list of resources compiled partly by me and more importantly, by other people who have a better grasp on the situation than myself.

They are to the best of our knowledge great resources but I still encourage you to do your research and put your money where you believe it will be used best.

If you find more ways to help or donate, add them in a reblog - let's get as much information out there as possible.

Much love and please stay safe

Covid update: India reports nearly 3.5 lakh new cases, record fatalities

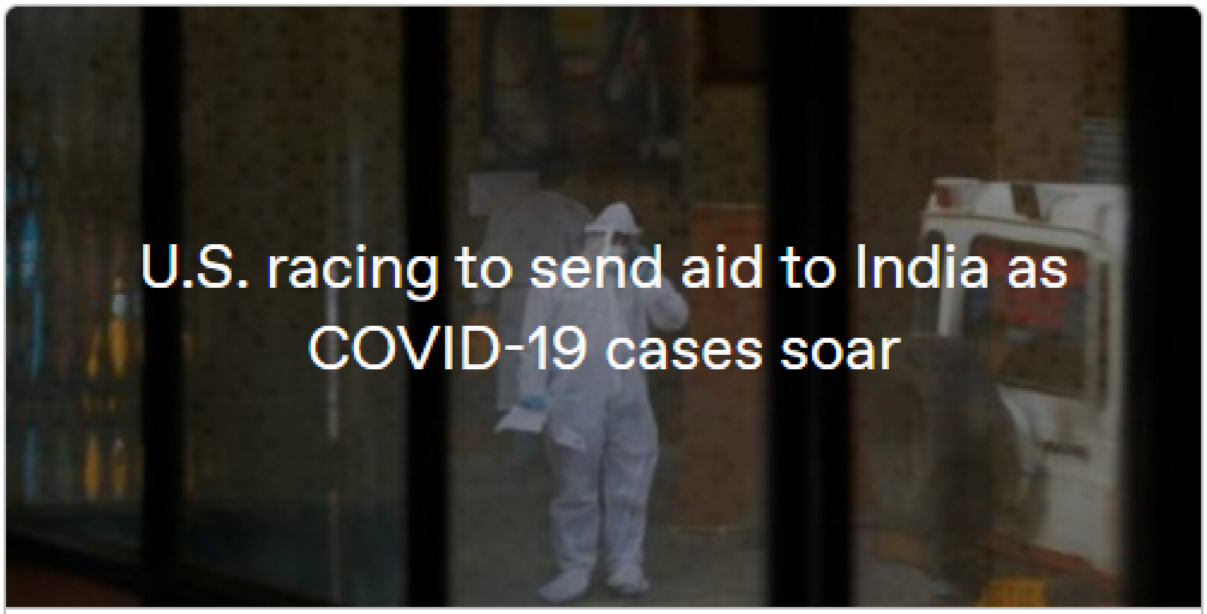
Things are dire. People are largely on their own now and help, if any, is yet to come.

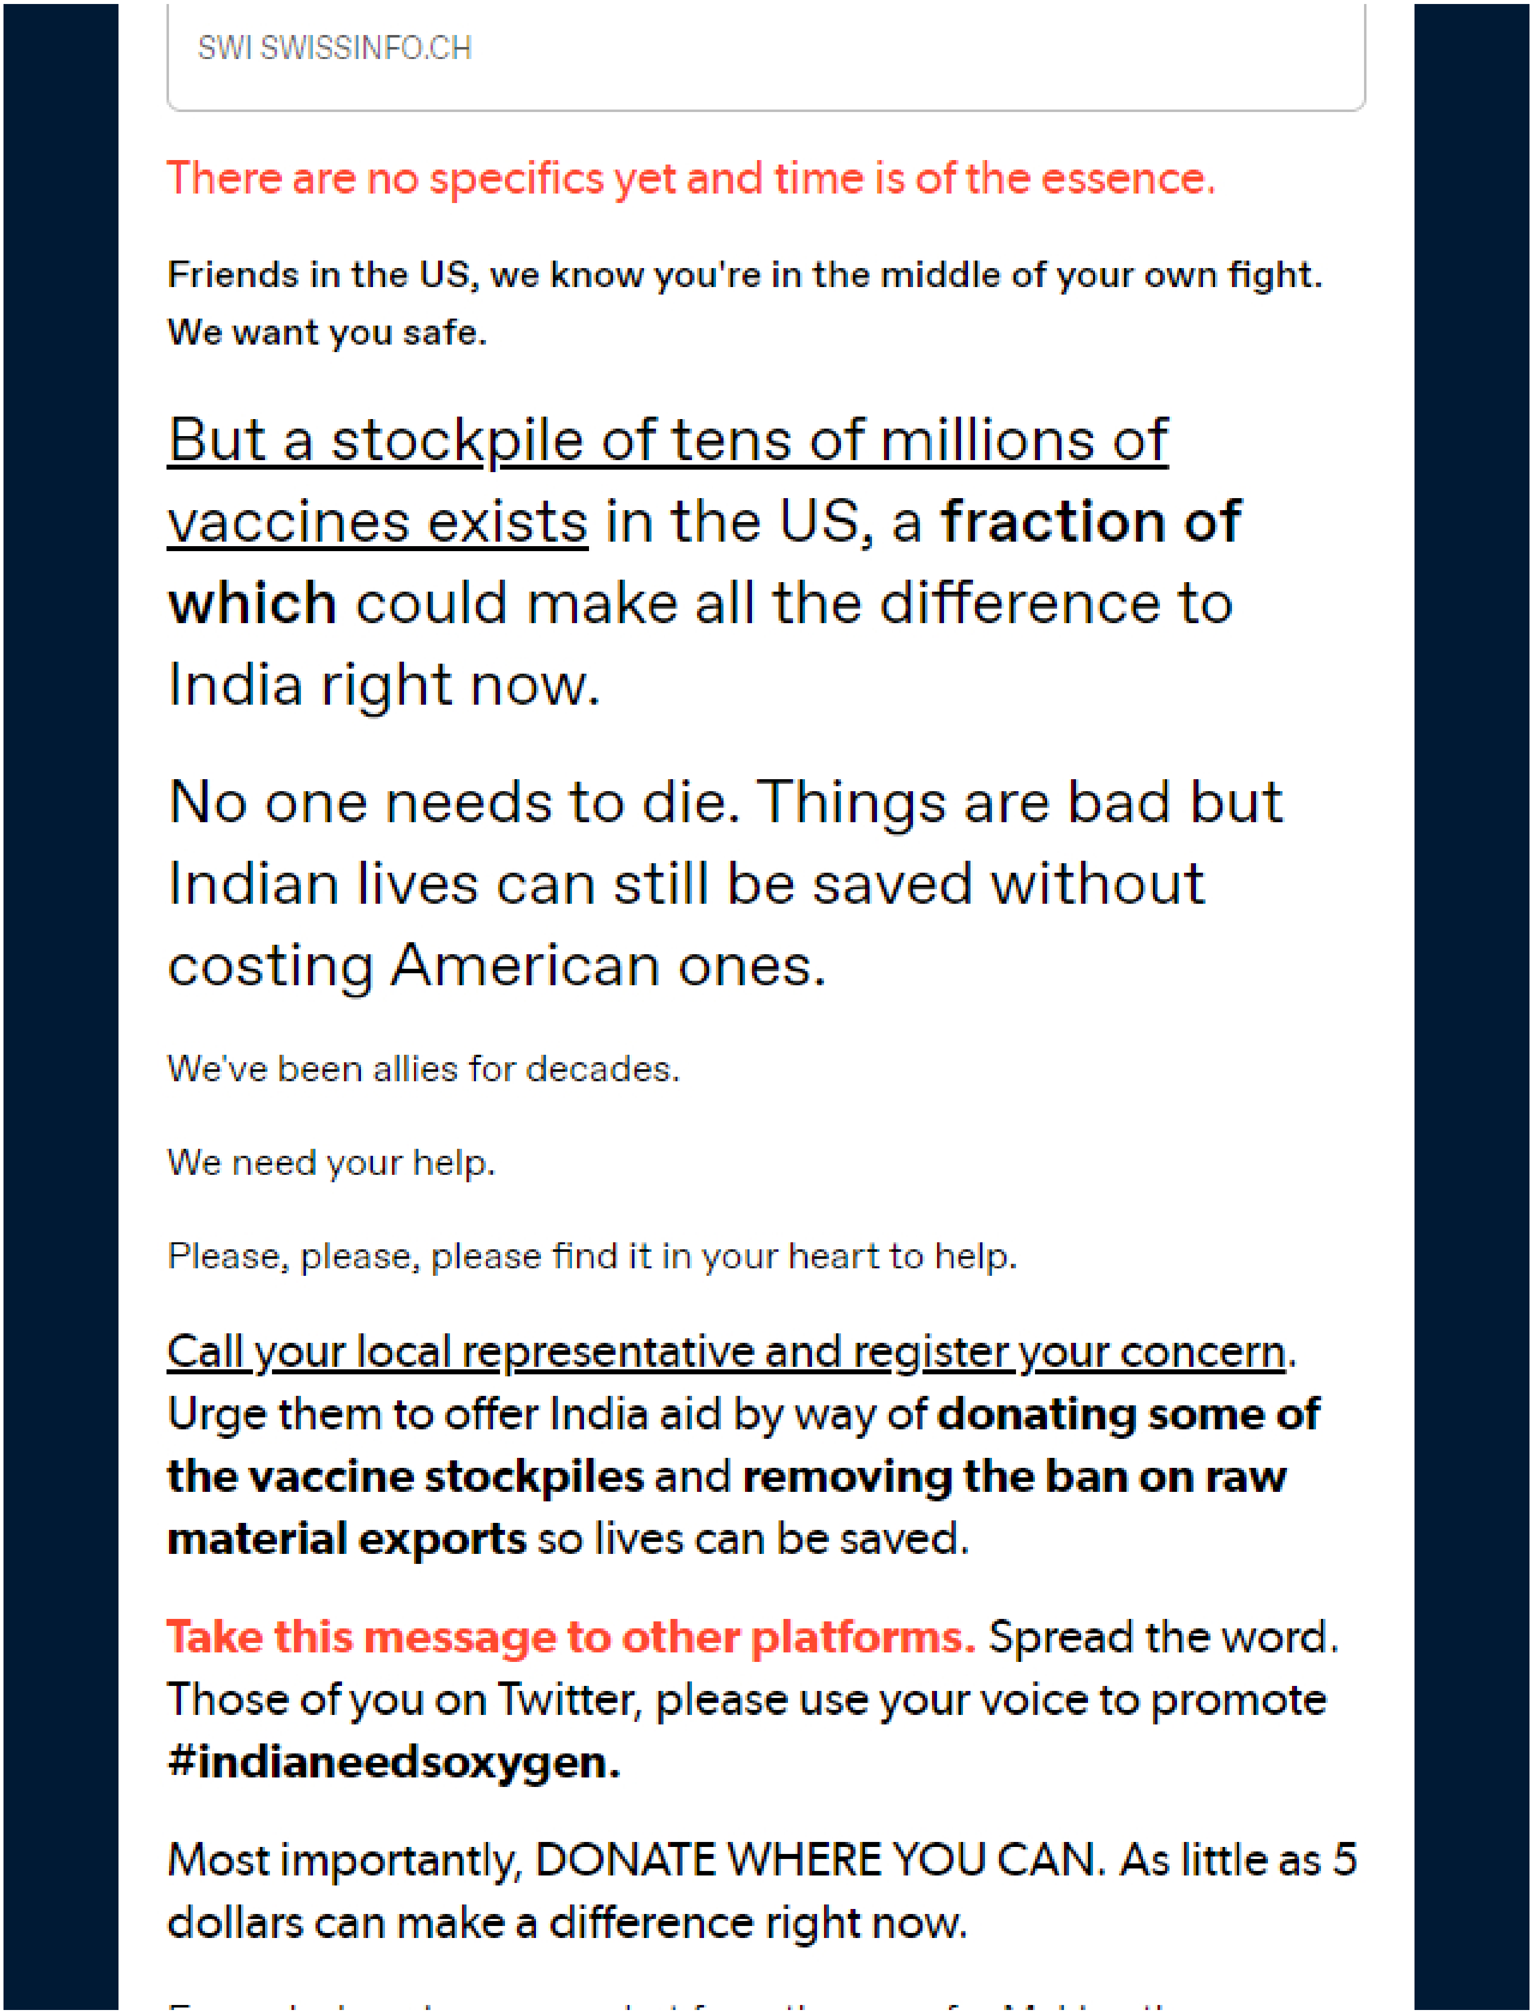
President Biden is being urged to ease restrictions or remove to embargo on raw materials that could be critical in India's fight against the virus.

Just a while ago, the US government committed to helping with "a small supply of inputs and components from US companies for production of COVID-19 vaccines in India".



U.S. racing to send aid to India as COVID-19 cases soar

By Andrea Shalal WILMINGTON, Del. (Reuters) -The United States is deeply concerned by a massive surge in coronavirus…



SWI SWISSINFO.CH

There are no specifics yet and time is of the essence.

Friends in the US, we know you're in the middle of your own fight. We want you safe.

But a stockpile of tens of millions of vaccines exists in the US, a fraction of which could make all the difference to India right now.

No one needs to die. Things are bad but Indian lives can still be saved without costing American ones.

We've been allies for decades.

We need your help.

Please, please, please find it in your heart to help.

Call your local representative and register your concern. Urge them to offer India aid by way of donating some of the vaccine stockpiles and removing the ban on raw material exports so lives can be saved.

Take this message to other platforms. Spread the word. Those of you on Twitter, please use your voice to promote #indianeedsoxygen.

Most importantly, DONATE WHERE YOU CAN. As little as 5 dollars can make a difference right now.

Example: here is a screenshot from the page for Making the Difference on Donatekart

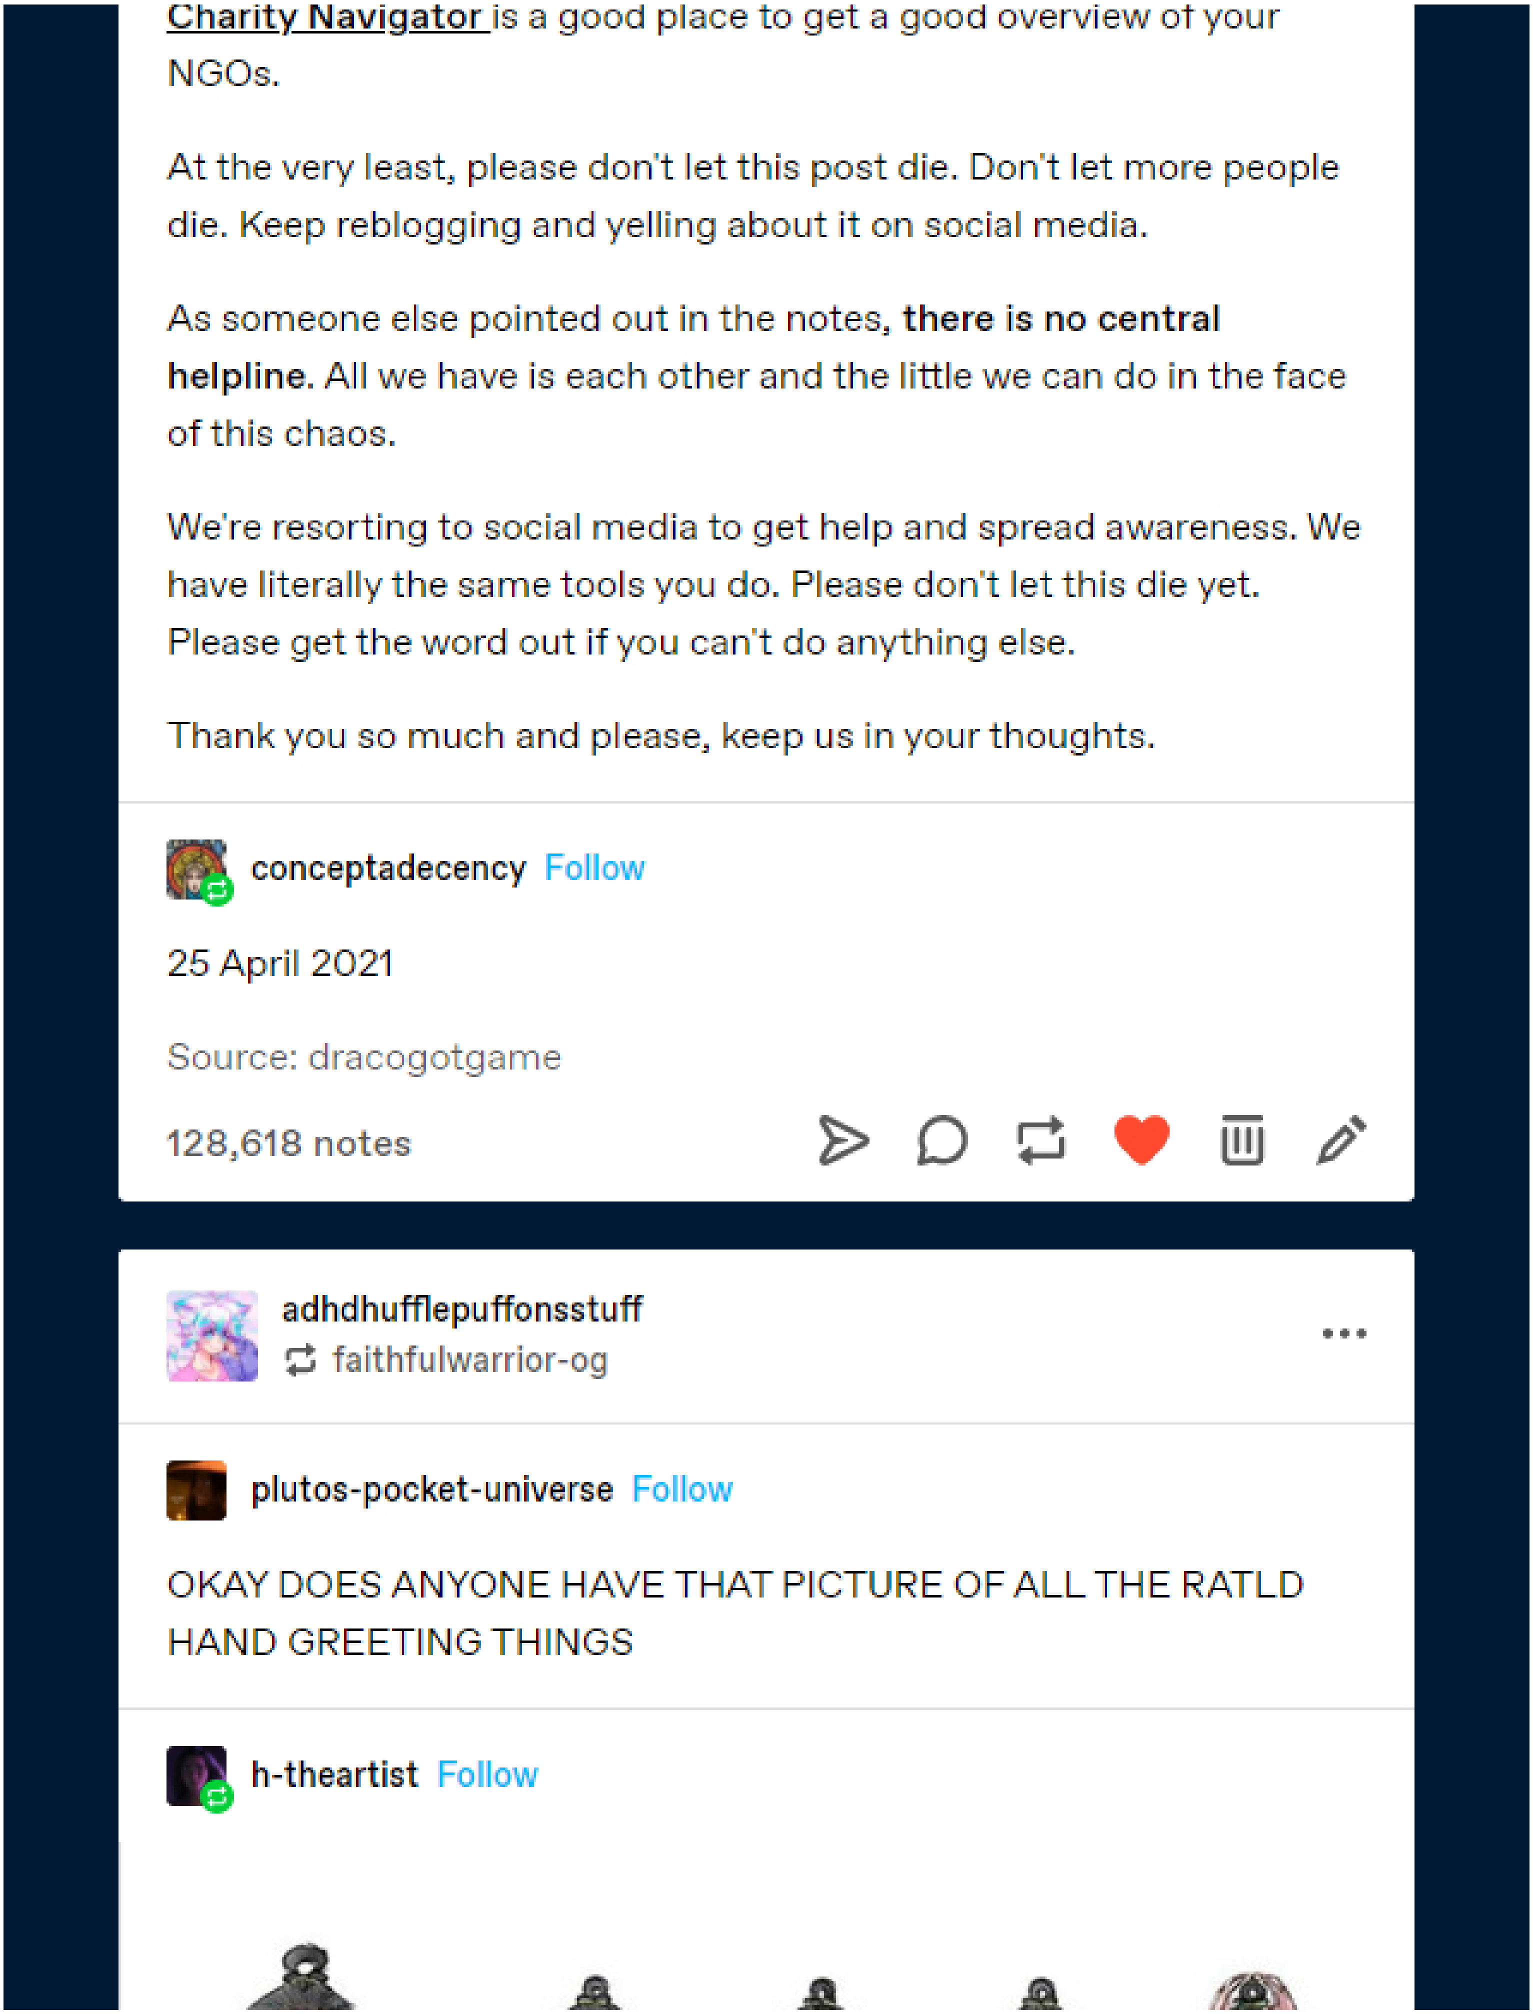
As little 7 dollars can get someone a bed or an oxygen tank.

Here's a list of independent NGOs and charities that are largely accepting international donations. REMEMBER: OXYGEN is the need of the hour.

I've heard from multiple sources that the government-run PM CARES fund is not directing funds to where they're needed and while I don't have exact information, I would advise you to avoid this platform out of caution.

Some of you are rightly concerned about where your money is going.

Again, I do not represent any charity or NGO, am not affiliated with anyone and am not involved in any stage in the collection or distribution of your donations. I'm just a person doing whatever she can so please do a little bit of research to help you identify the best place to put your donation.



Charity Navigator is a good place to get a good overview of your NGOs.

At the very least, please don't let this post die. Don't let more people die. Keep reblogging and yelling about it on social media.

As someone else pointed out in the notes, there is no central helpline. All we have is each other and the little we can do in the face of this chaos.

We're resorting to social media to get help and spread awareness. We have literally the same tools you do. Please don't let this die yet. Please get the word out if you can't do anything else.

Thank you so much and please, keep us in your thoughts.

THOTH is the Egyptian god of writing, magic, wisdom, and the moon. He was one of the most important gods of ancient Egypt alternately said to be self-created or born of the seed of Horus from the forehead of Set.

As the son of these two deities, who represented order and chaos respectively, he was also the god of equilibrium and balance and associated closely with both the principle of ma'at (divine balance) and the goddess Ma'at who personified this principle (and who was sometimes seen as his wife).

Another of his consorts was the goddess Nehemetawy ('She Who Embraces Those In Need") a protector goddess. In his form as A'an, Thoth presided over the judgment of the dead with Osiris in the Hall of the Truth and those souls who feared they might not pass through the judgment safely were encouraged to call upon Thoth for help.

The consort most often associated with Thoth was Seshat, > goddess of writing, the keeper of books, and patron goddess of libraries and librarians who was alternately his wife or daughter.

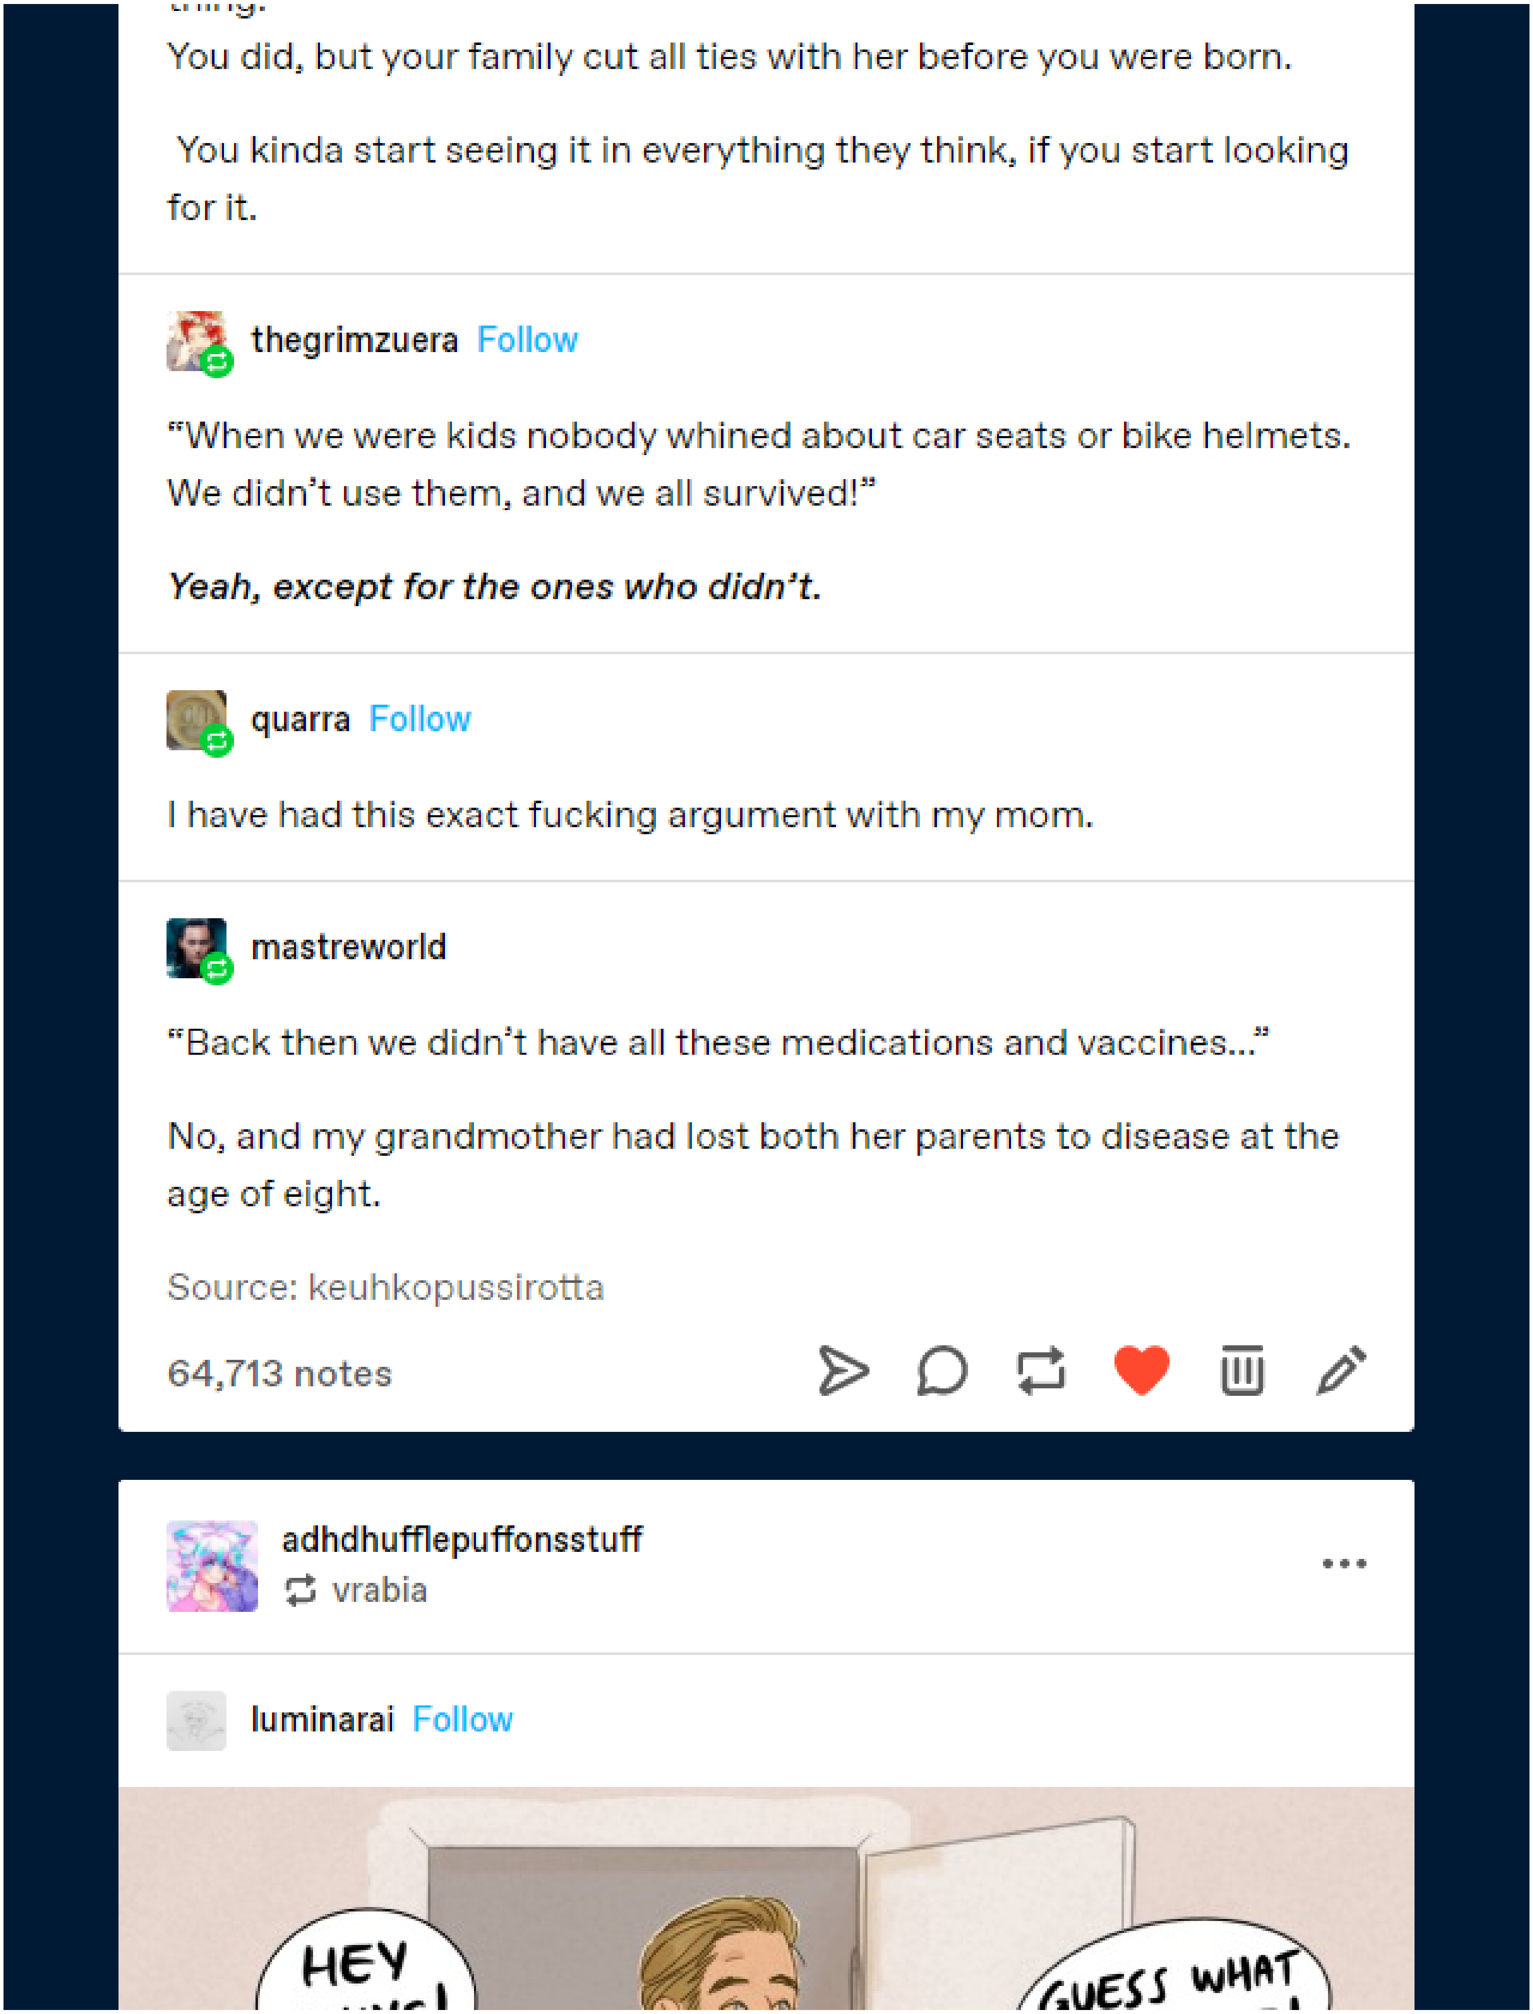
You ever think about how old people have no idea what “survivor bias” is, and take full credit for being excellent out of things where they lucked out?

“Back in my day we didn’t have any of these childhood protective things, we were smart enough not to do stupid shit on our own!”
Except your little neighbour, who got the funniest idea at the age of seven, and got his skull pierced when he slipped?

“Back in my day nobody got divorced, we stuck together and fixed our problems!”
What about your cousin, who was slowly killed by her husband because she had nowhere to escape him?

“Back in my day nobody had ‘mental problems’, we didn’t whine, we just toughed it out and endured life!”
Hey remember that guy you used to work with, who seemed really friendly and normal, and then suddenly hanged himself ‘for no reason’?

“Back in my day we didn’t have any of this ‘gay’ or ‘transgender’ thing.”



You did, but your family cut all ties with her before you were born.

You kinda start seeing it in everything they think, if you start looking for it.

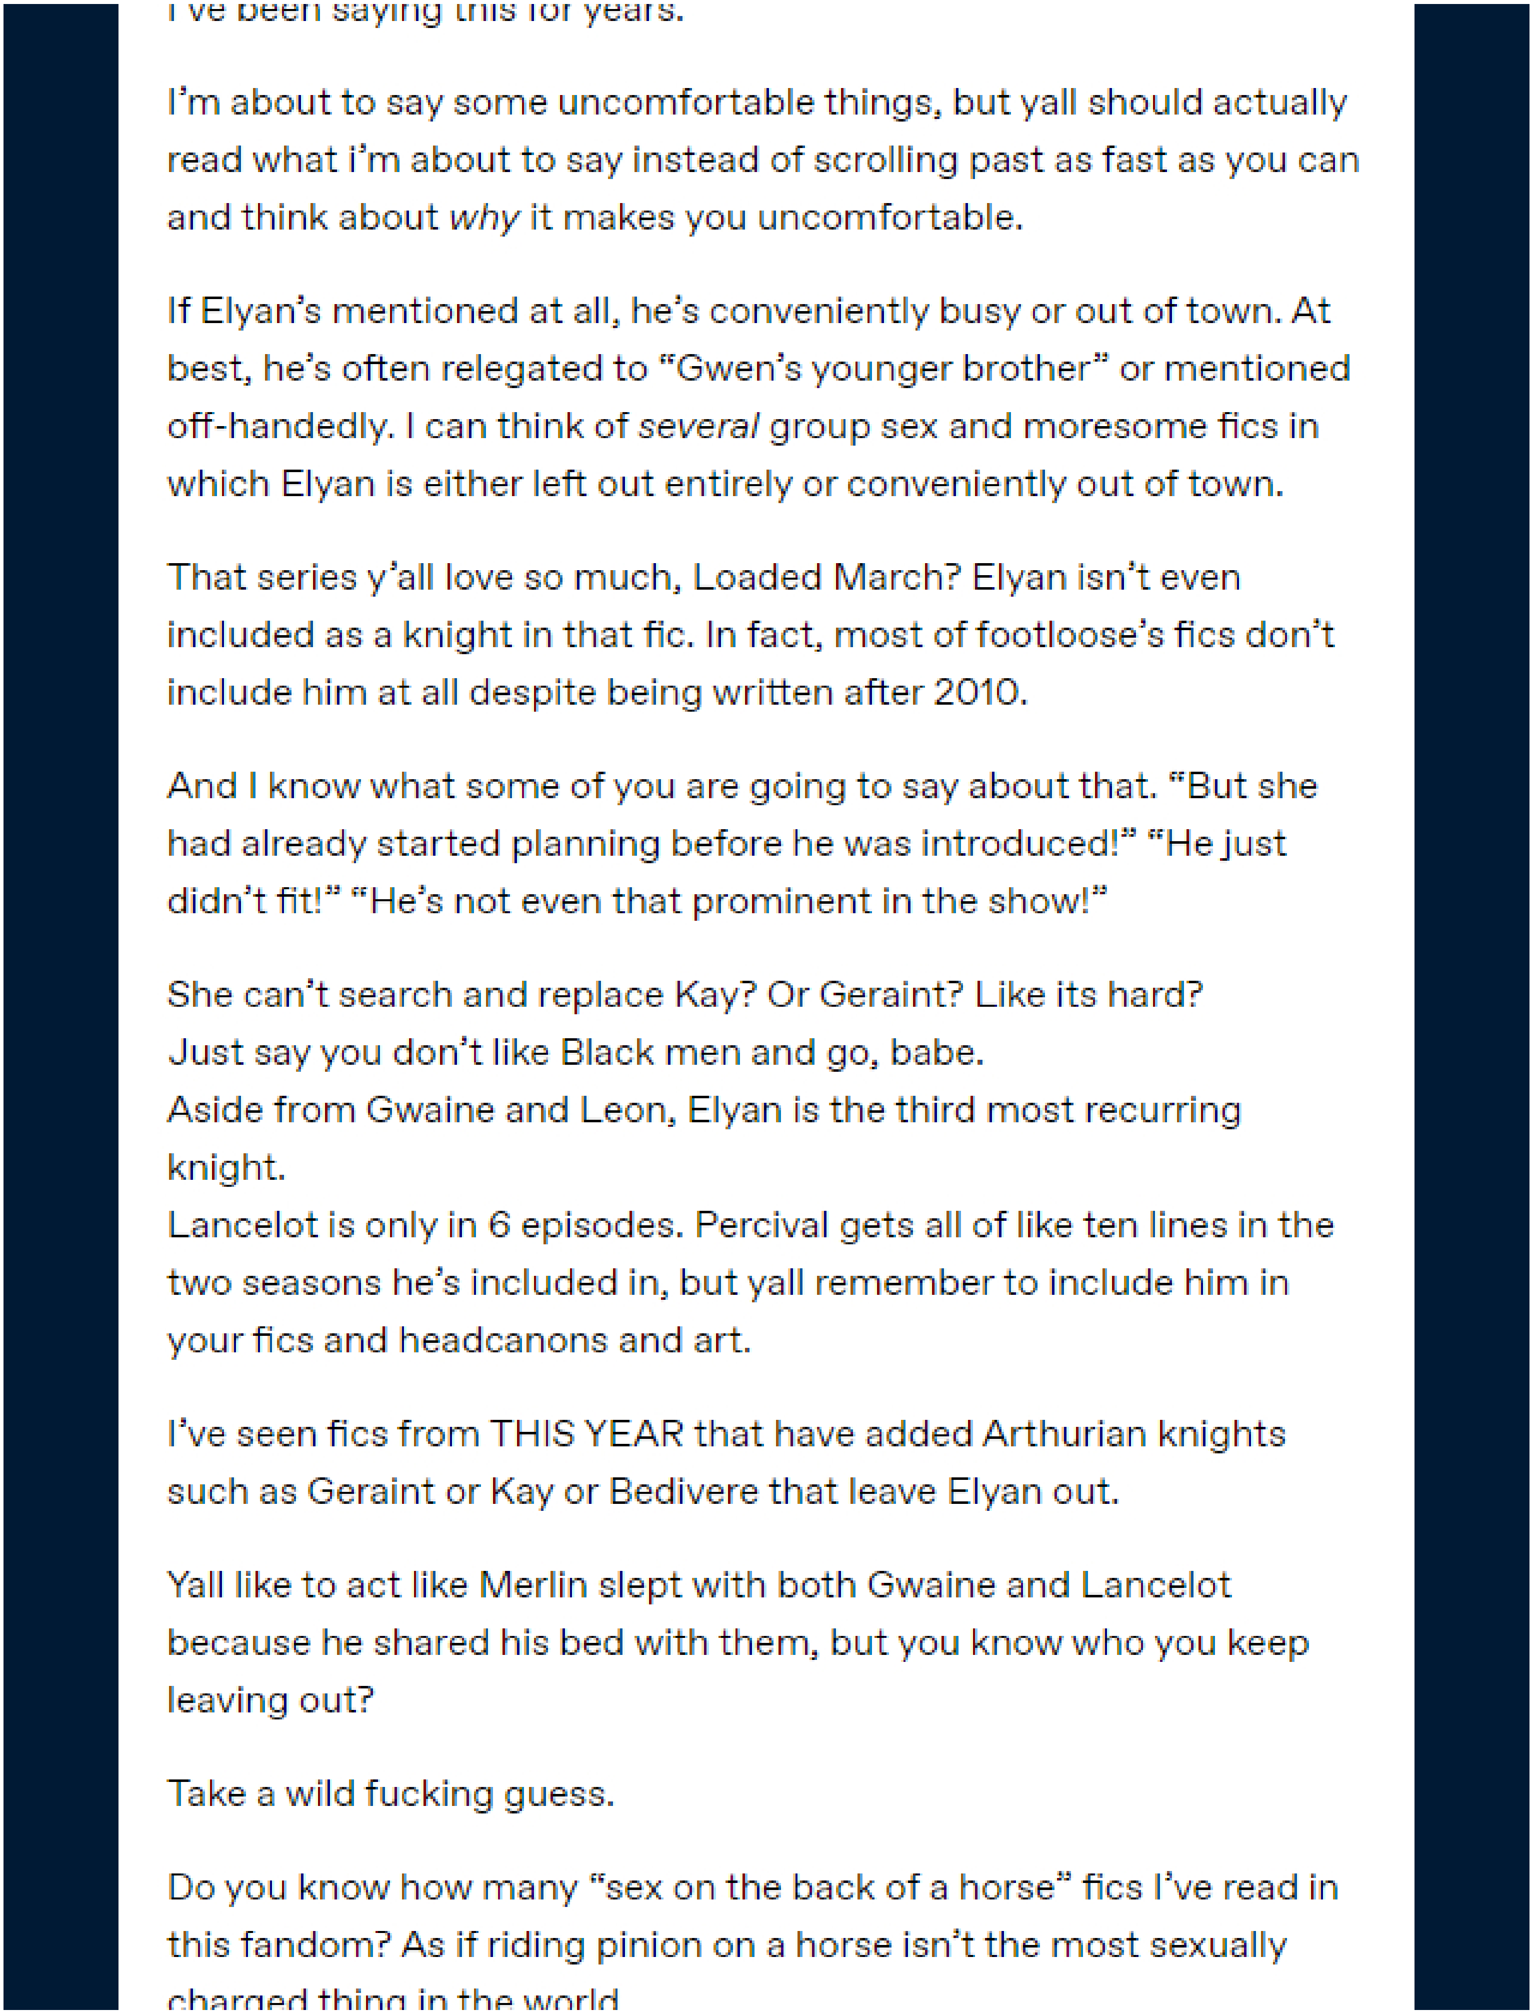
just so u know it's very noticeable when u include the knights in ur fics but elyan mysteriously does not exist

the-mother-of-lions Follow

Usually I just reblog this and move on, but I'm fucking Tired yall and i'm more than sure I'm about to bleed followers.

I've been saying this for years



I've been saying this for years.

I'm about to say some uncomfortable things, but yall should actually read what i'm about to say instead of scrolling past as fast as you can and think about why it makes you uncomfortable.

If Elyan's mentioned at all, he's conveniently busy or out of town. At best, he's often relegated to "Gwen's younger brother" or mentioned off-handedly. I can think of several group sex and moresome fics in which Elyan is either left out entirely or conveniently out of town.

That series y'all love so much, Loaded March? Elyan isn't even included as a knight in that fic. In fact, most of footloose's fics don't include him at all despite being written after 2010.

And I know what some of you are going to say about that. "But she had already started planning before he was introduced!" "He just didn't fit!" "He's not even that prominent in the show!"

She can't search and replace Kay? Or Geraint? Like its hard?
Just say you don't like Black men and go, babe.
Aside from Gwaine and Leon, Elyan is the third most recurring knight.
Lancelot is only in 6 episodes. Percival gets all of like ten lines in the two seasons he's included in, but yall remember to include him in your fics and headcanons and art.

I've seen fics from THIS YEAR that have added Arthurian knights such as Geraint or Kay or Bedivere that leave Elyan out.

Yall like to act like Merlin slept with both Gwaine and Lancelot because he shared his bed with them, but you know who you keep leaving out?

Take a wild fucking guess.

Do you know how many "sex on the back of a horse" fics I've read in this fandom? As if riding pinion on a horse isn't the most sexually charged thing in the world charged thing in the world.

Elyan could have walked or shared with his SISTER.

There are so many giffers and artists in this fandom, yet almost none of yall can seem to remember to include Elyan in your group gifsets or in your portraits of all the knights. I could name five people right now who I know don't ever include Elyan.

On my server, I've suggested Elyan related art I don't know how many times, and yet no one ever picks it up. Yet I can drop the same prompt with Merlin/Arthur and I can almost guarantee I'll see it before the end of the week.

I've seen multiple people say they flat out do not care if Elyan is included in things, so long as their white faves (Lancelot, Gwaine, Leon, Percival) are included. I've seen people jump through mental hoops trying to figure out who else to include in their fics when they need a character despite Elyan not yet having a role or really even crossing their minds.

Why is that?

Well. We know why.

At the end of this month begins six whole weeks of Elyan Appreciation with the @elyan-fest account.

It's past time we start making up for his lack of inclusion.

If you've ever gone to a beach to watch the sunrise or sunset, you definitely want to get yourself one of these.

I got mine here for anyone wondering >> SUNSET LIGHT

some notes:

-most of the anime has both the English and Japanese audio tracks and you can toggle between them in your video player. They also have English subs. Sometimes burnt in

-if you want subtitles and they aren't there already just tell me I can add them

-some older shows are lower quality and that's all I could find but 90% of these are HD 720 or 1080. Mix of mp4 and mkv files

-most shows folders contain all seasons

-the root movie folders that u see in the screenshots contain subfolders of movies under that title if I have them. For example the GODZILLA folder has subfolders containing every GODZILLA movie ever released. THE INCREDIBLES contains both 1 and 2. You can choose to download both or either

I hesitated, feeling danger crowd in on me.

“Aleksander,” I whispered.

His grin faded, and his gray eyes seemed to flicker.

“Again,” he said.

“Aleksander.”

He leaned in. I felt his breath against my neck, then the press of his mouth against my skin just above the collar, almost a sigh.

“Don’t,” I said. I drew back, but he held me tighter. His hand went to the nape of my neck, long fingers twining in my hair, easing my head back. I closed my eyes.

“Let me,” he murmured against my throat. His heel hooked around my leg, bringing me closer. I felt the heat of his tongue, the flex of hard muscle beneath bare skin as he

#what the fuck? idek what yall are saying who drives 3 hours just to eat #where in america do you have to drive 3 hours to consume food? i went there on vacation a few times and i mean there were Restaurants there #confusion

Do Europeans never do things just because they're bored and want some very specific tacos missfay49

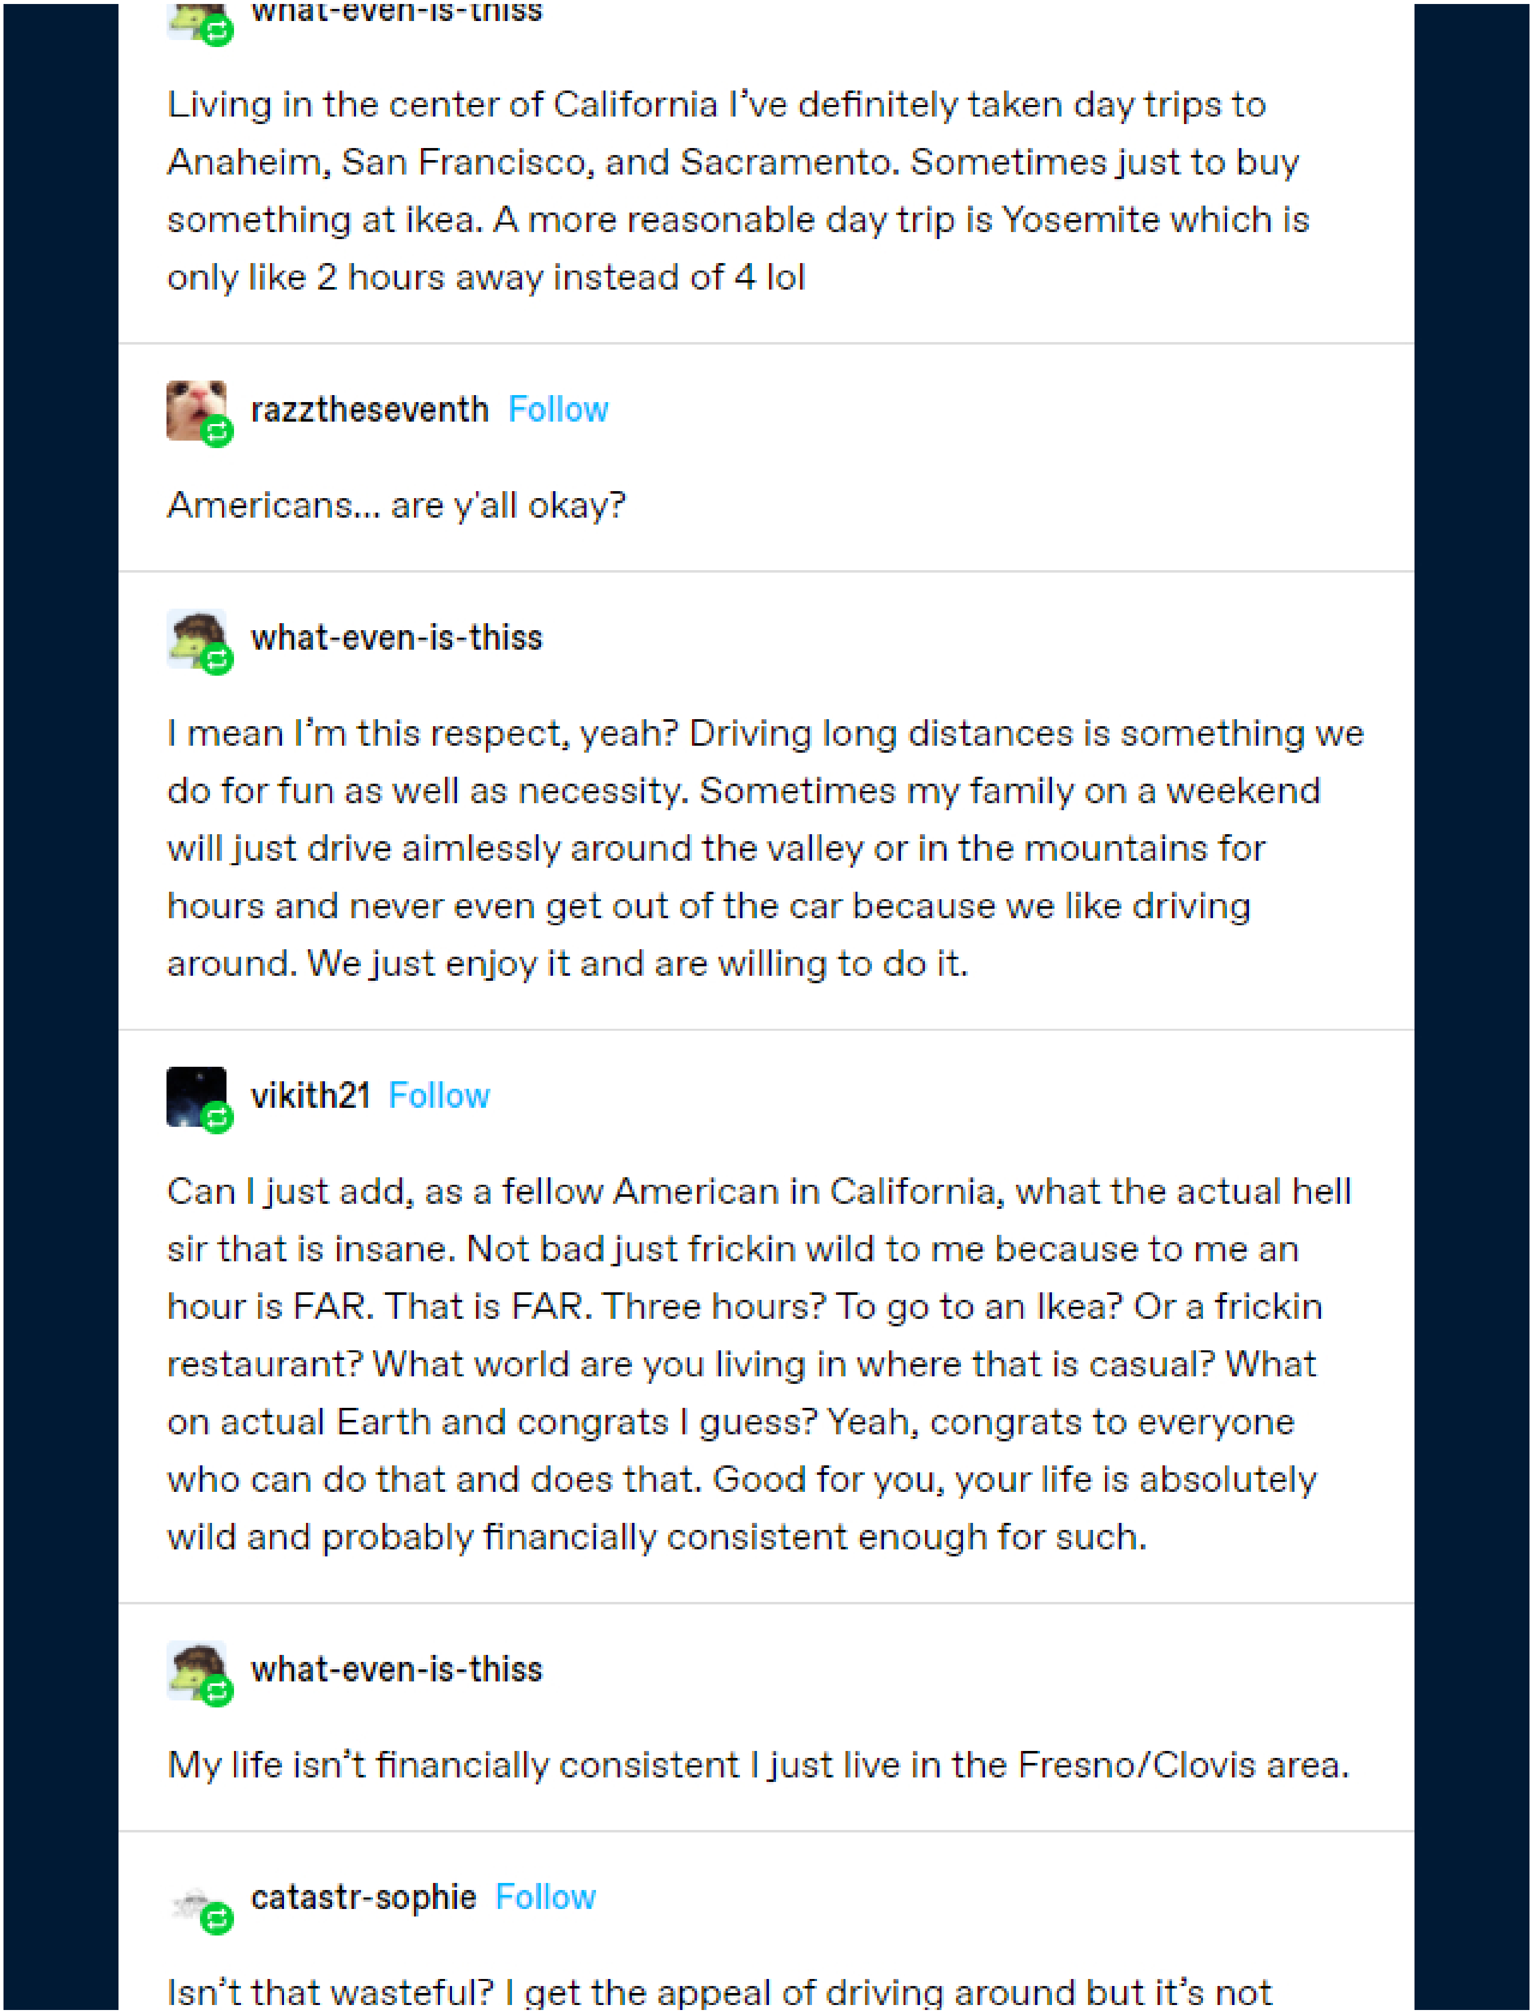
It's called a day trip to St. Louis and we have absolutely driven 3 hours there and 3 back and spent maybe 3 hours there total.



what-even-is-thiss

Living in the center of California I've definitely taken day trips to Anaheim, San Francisco, and Sacramento. Sometimes just to buy something at ikea. A more reasonable day trip is Yosemite which is only like 2 hours away instead of 4 lol

razztheseventh Follow

Americans... are y'all okay?

what-even-is-thiss

I mean I'm this respect, yeah? Driving long distances is something we do for fun as well as necessity. Sometimes my family on a weekend will just drive aimlessly around the valley or in the mountains for hours and never even get out of the car because we like driving around. We just enjoy it and are willing to do it.

vikith21 Follow

Can I just add, as a fellow American in California, what the actual hell sir that is insane. Not bad just frickin wild to me because to me an hour is FAR. That is FAR. Three hours? To go to an Ikea? Or a frickin restaurant? What world are you living in where that is casual? What on actual Earth and congrats I guess? Yeah, congrats to everyone who can do that and does that. Good for you, your life is absolutely wild and probably financially consistent enough for such.

what-even-is-thiss

My life isn't financially consistent I just live in the Fresno/Clovis area.

catastr-sophie Follow

Isn't that wasteful? I get the appeal of driving around but it's not exactly eco-friendly.

what-even-is-thiss

Neither are any of my clothes but the world is how it is.

catastr-sophie

Clothes are a necessity. Driving around isn’t. Giving up on our planet doesn’t exactly work to our advantage.

what-even-is-thiss

Can’t you aim that energy at nestle or shell instead of someone who has to walk 20 minutes to get to the nearest bus stop because of the layout of their city and likes to drive around for fun sometimes

catastr-sophie

I am. I don’t understand why you’re so upset with me. I usually agree with your opinions except today when you put your enjoyment over your ecological impact. You have a lot of followers and I’d like to think they would follow your example

what-even-is-thiss

I’m not upset. It’s just baffling to me that you care so much. I’m not giving up on the planet just because I drive for fun once in a while. I disagree with you on this and I’m fine with that.

This week is my grandfather's 90th birthday. Here he is during our family's celebration, singing in Yiddish.

I tried to find the lyrics to this song on Google, but it's failing me. At any rate, it's something like, "the rabbi performed many miracles – he went into the water, and he came out wet!" and then something about "he went into the fire, and came out a new man."

And something in English about miracles and wonders.

ok y'all this isn't a psych textbook gaslighting you into thinking it's normal and ok for your boss to yell at you, it's specifically about understanding that other people's treatment of you is usually more about them than you.

If your boss is pissy with you, it's absolutely more healthy to understand that behavior as a reflection of his mental state rather than of your worth as an employee.

It's not a psych textbook's job to advise you how to improve your workplace or say what is/isn't acceptable treatment by a boss. It's an example of detaching your own self-worth from how other people treat you.

When I was playing Dracula on the stage, my audiences were women. Women. There were men, too. Escorts the women had brought with them. For reasons only their dark subconscious knew. In order to establish a subtle sex intimacy. Contact. In order to cling and to feel the sensuous thrill of protection. Men did not come of their own volition. Women did. Came—and knew an ecstasy dragged from the depths of unspeakable things. Came—and then came back again. And again. [Here Hall added in a parenthesis: "Was there gloating in his voice, or was it my chilled imagination playing me tricks, feverish and fantastical?"]

Women wrote me letters. Ah, what letters women wrote me! Young girls. Women from seventeen to thirty. Letters of a horrible hunger. Asking me if I cared only for maiden's blood. Asking me if I had done the play because I was in reality that sort of Thing. And through these letters, couched in terms of shuddering, transparent fear, there ran the hideous note of—hope.

They hoped that I was DRACULA. They hoped that my love was the love of DRACULA. They gloated over the Thing they dared not understand. . . .

It was the embrace of Death their subconscious was yearning for. Death, the final triumphant lover.

It made me know that the women of America are unsatisfied, famished, craving sensation, even though it be the sensation of death draining the red blood of life.[23]

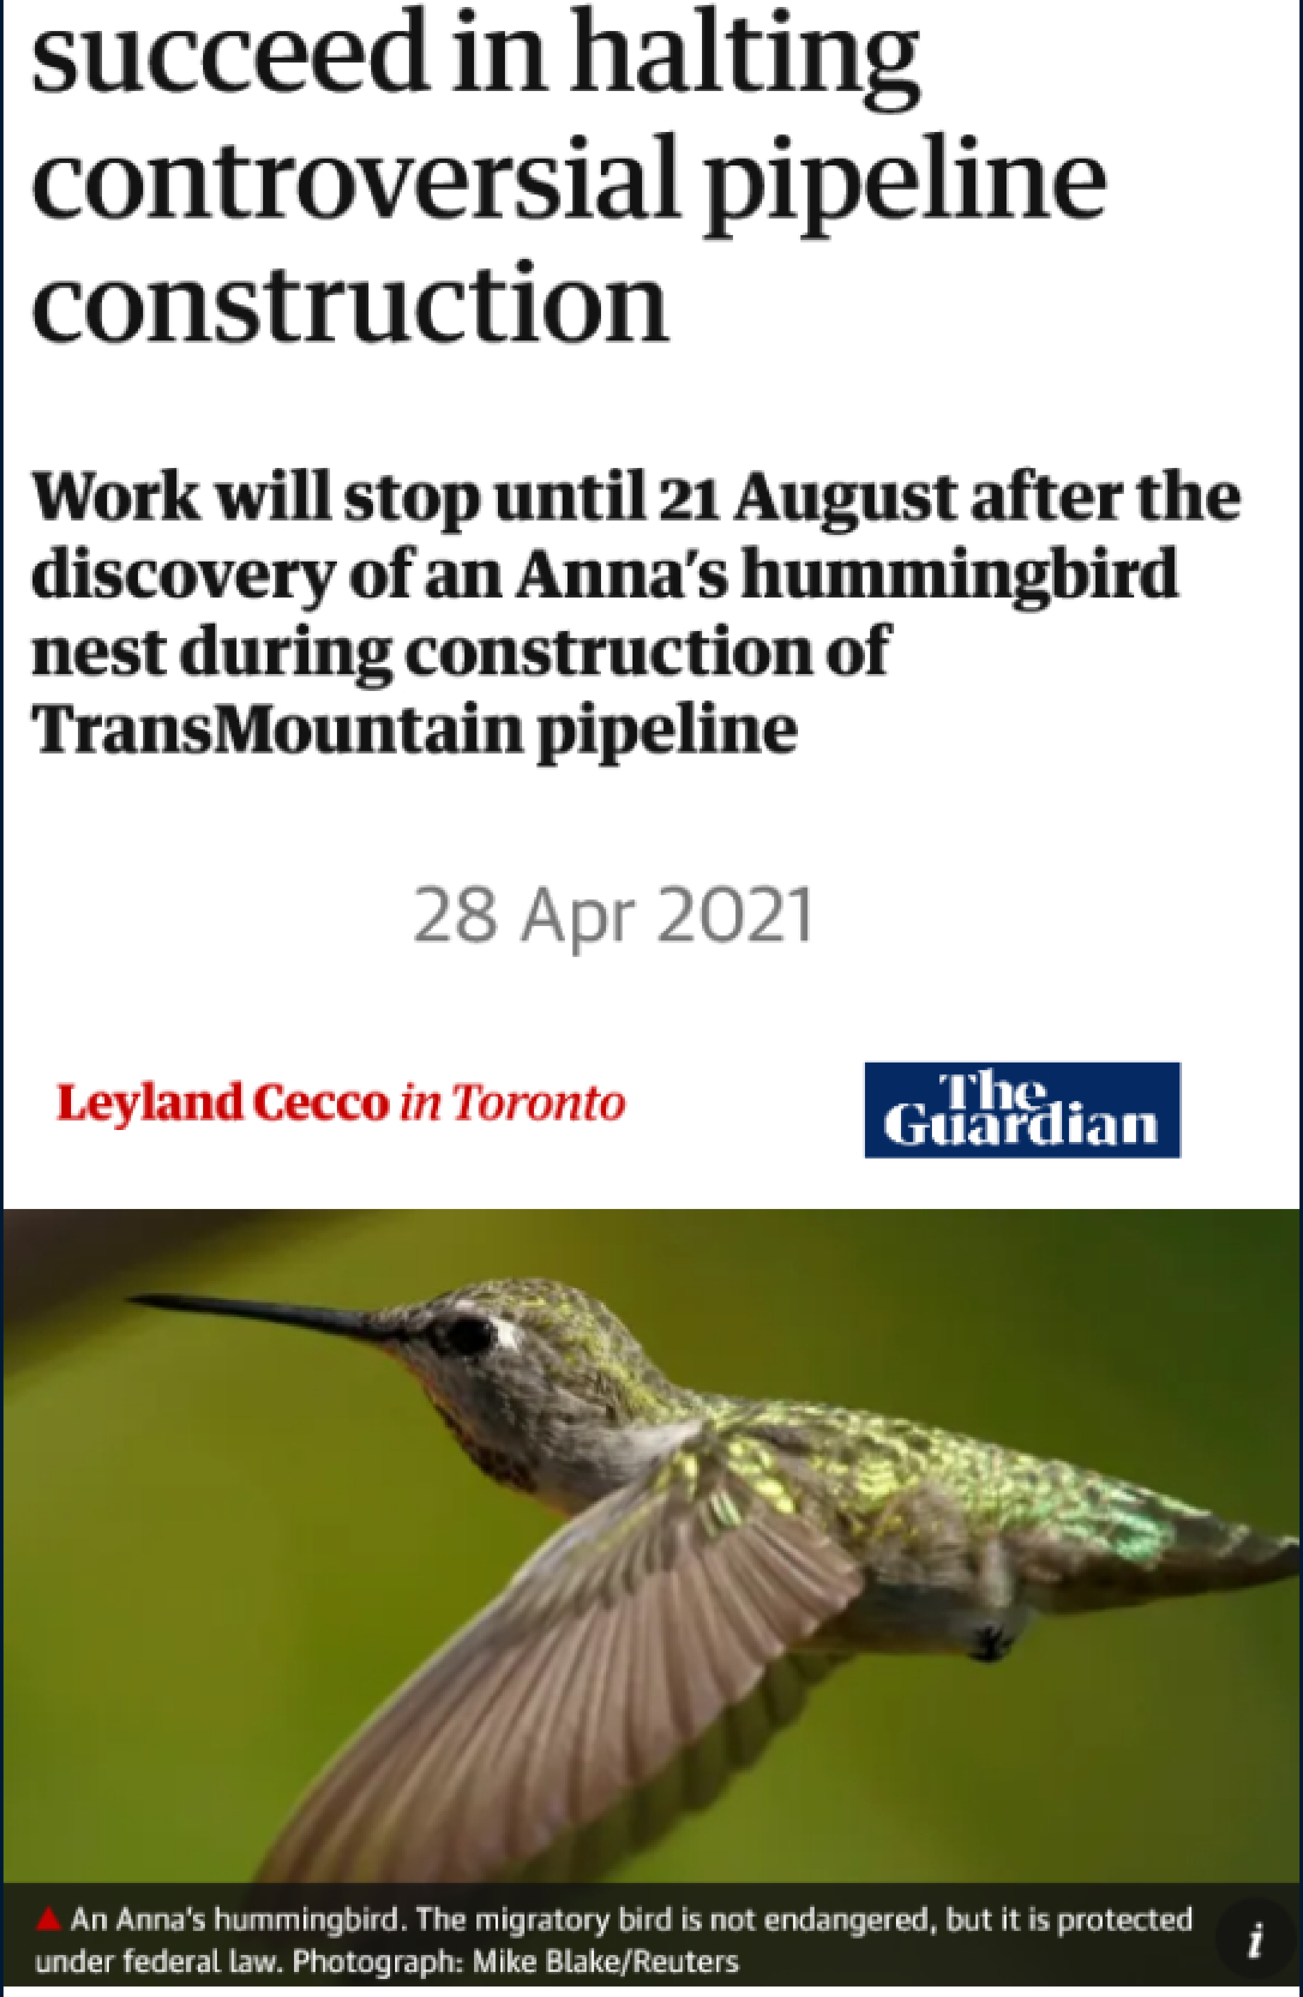
Canada: hummingbirds



succeed in halting controversial pipeline construction

Work will stop until 21 August after the discovery of an Anna's hummingbird nest during construction of TransMountain pipeline

Activists and protesters have tried fruitlessly for years to stop the construction of the controversial TransMountain oil pipeline in western Canada.

Now, a tiny hummingbird have succeeded where others have fallen short, forcing construction on the multibillion-dollar project to halt for the next four months.

Environment and Climate Change Canada has ordered work to stop until 21 August after the discovery of an Anna's hummingbird nest in a tree felled during construction of the pipeline.

TransMountain, which was purchased by Justin Trudeau's government in 2018, said the stop-work order applied to a 900 meter tract of land but doesn't impact its planned completion date in late 2022. It also plans to continue on whatever construction is still permitted under the order.

Marred by cost overruns in recent months, the C$12.6bn ($10bn) project will nearly triple capacity of the existing pipeline, moving 890,000 barrels of crude oil each day to the Pacific Ocean when complete.

Headline, image, caption, and text published by: Leyland Cecco. "Canada: hummingbirds succeed in halting controversial pipeline construction." The Guardian. 28 April 2021.

ok, but why was years of sustained and impassioned actions and resistance from Secwempec, Salish, and other Indigenous peoples along the route of the pipeline not enough to halt construction?

suddenly Canadian institutions are like “we can ignore continued pleas from First Nations, Secwempec homes built along the route, RCMP attacks on Indigenous camps in brutal mid-winter conditions and other state violence against Indigenous land defenders, BC’s Highway of Tears and missing and murdered Indigenous women, the felling of both inland and coastal temperate rainforest sacred to Indigenous peoples, and attempts by Indigenous peoples within BC borders to manage their own land for stuff like harvesting berries and protecting caribou herds … but we can’t ignore legally-compelled bureaucratic assessments of one of the few creatures the government chooses to acknowledge as worth considering which will, in the end, after the paperwork is filed, result in no change, death of hummingbirds regardless, and continued pipeline construction.”

Hey! I could really use some help finding a forever home for my current foster betta, Comet. It's been weeks and I haven't gotten anyone asking about him on the usual websites and forums I use to find good homes for my bettas.

I have to move out of where I currently am in about a week so I'm getting desperate, as I'd like to have Comet adopted and in his forever home before then. Please, if you or anyone you know live near northern NJ or the south border of NY, and could give a betta a good home, please DM me or have whoever DM me so we can talk details. Comet is a lovely, healthy and energetic fish that deserves a good home.

Even if you don't know anything, could you please reblog this post to help spread the word? I'd really appreciate everyone who helps.
